Dictator Bill Foes Again Lose Test

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 8—Embattled foes of the administration's reorganization bill were defeated in the House today in a vigorous effort to maintain a comptroller-general—the "watchdog of the Treasury"—independent of the President and answerable only to Congress.

The House leadership rallied supporters of the bill to kill an amendment offered by Representative Case (R.) South Dakota, who charged that reorganization provisions for transfer of the comptroller-general from an independent status to an executive officer "defeats the whole intent of Congress to keep the general accounting office independent."

"This bill," he said, "strips every shred of independence from the comptroller-general in safeguarding expenditures."

VINSON REFUTES CHARGE

Representative Vinson (D.) of Kentucky, in charge of the auditing provisions of the bill hotly denied the charge of case.

"I submit that any fair-minded man who studies the history of our Government will see that

Strike Halts Movement Of Produce

$300,000 Supply Is Tied Up in Boston; Man Slugged

Without warning, 400 employes of the Boston Market Terminal on Fargo street, in the heart of the South Boston market district, went on strike today, paralyzing the entire wholesale fruit and produce business of Greater Boston.

One man, an independent dealer, was attacked and punched by three men after he was pulled from the cab of his truck, laden with fruits and vegetables, as he was about to drive away. His ignition keys were thrown down a sewer.

The entire district was thrown into confusion in the midst of the usual pre-week-end activity when the 400 men dropped their work at 10:30 a. m.

Six officers of the South Boston station were sent to join railroad police, from adjoining yards, and company police in maintaining order.

According to the striking workers, the walkout was called in protest of the various truck dealers employed by independent dealers doing business in the terminal who are not union members.

Close to $300,000 worth of fruit and vegetables was tied up as the men walked out. Much of the food is perishable.

Filipinos Jail 151 'Lie-Down' Strikers

MANILA, April 8 (AP)—A court at San Francisco, Pampanga province, sentenced 151 "lie-down" strikers to jail today for one to two months and fined them $50 to $100 for creating a "tumultous disturbance" during a strike in a government-owned quarry.

Blum Voted Down, Quits In France

PARIS, April 8 (AP)—Premier Leon Blum formally announced the resignation of his government tonight after the Senate had voted down his demand for dictatorial powers over French finance.

Immediately after the Senate, by a vote of 223 to 49, had shown its disdain for his "last call," the premier dashed out of the Luxembourg Palace, the Senate building, through the ranks of steel-helmeted mobile guards to the Chamber of Deputies.

There he announced his resignation to the deputies of his own Socialist party, who had assembled to hear his decision.

He told them he was going to the Elysee Palace to tell President Albert Lebrun he was through.

THREATS EXCHANGED

Blum's defeat came after a bitter debate with frequent exchanges of threats. The premier and senators accused each other of failure to uphold Republican principles. Blum challenged the right of the senate to cause his government's downfall.

"Let me tell you again," Blum shouted, "you have no rights to decide the fate of my government."

Outside the senate building steel-helmeted mobile guards carrying carbines paced back and forth.

Anticipating Blum's resignation, Edouard Daladier, his minister of defense, prepared a list of a new cabinet.

The test case came on a first vote, ordinarily a preliminary stage, but the Senate immediately

Job Cerain, Says Mayor At Capital

Talks With Son Jim, WPA Aide Williams In Washington

WASHINGTON, April 8 (INS)—Mayor Maurice J. Tobin of Boston announced today following conferences with federal officials, that he was prepared to undertake immediately a $5,000,000 extension of the Huntington avenue subway from the Mechanics building to Gainsborough street.

Tobin talked with James Roosevelt, secretary of the President, and also Deputy WPA Administrator Aubrey Williams, later declaring:

"The project will go through; there is no question about it."

The Boston mayor said he expected to get a grant to pay for WPA day labor on the subway job and also was "seeking a generous share of the material cost." The balance will be financed, he expects, by a federal loan, the exact amount of which he was not prepared to disclose today.

An invitation was extended to President Roosevelt by Tobin through James Roosevelt to participate in the Bunker Hill Day celebration at Charlestown on June 17. On the following day the President's youngest son John marries Miss Anne Lindsay Clark, Boston debutante, at Nahant.

Jobs Plan Lifts Stocks $1-$4

NEW YORK, April 8 (AP)—Broad buying swept stocks upward today in a market which brokers said was animated chiefly by reports of another federal spending drive to promote business recovery.

The rush to buy subsided, however, and gains were pared a bit after Wall Street had scanned President Roosevelt's comment in his press conference that no decision on public works spending has been made.

Such leaders as United States Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, du Pont, General Electric, Montgomery Ward and International Harvester were lifted $1 to more than $4.

Bonds and major commodities joined the new swing upward. Wheat futures at Chicago and cotton pushed ahead.

Roosevelt, Mayors Confer on Jobs

By International News Service

The nation was mobilized today for a tremendous effort to turn the tide of business.

With billions of dollars planned for public works and loans, with relaxed taxation on industry and capital almost a certainty, with the attention of legislators drawn sharply to the demands of business, the administration and Congress prepared to move on a broad front.

At the beginning of the second great pump priming by the Federal government, major developments were:

The Senate sped to passage the new $5,300,000,000 tax bill which repeals outright the levies on corporate undistributed profits and modifies the capital gains assessment.

President Roosevelt, not quite ready to reveal plans for the new $1,500,000,000 public works program forecast unofficially, paved the way for an announcement with the statement that a billion dollars would not be enough for relief in the coming fiscal year.

Congress was ready to approve, in addition to $1,500,000,000 for public works; another billion-and-a-half for relief through the Works Progress Administration.

The United States Conference of Mayors urged $3,000,000,000 be appropriated to give work to 3,500,000 needy. Mayor LaGuardia of New York, at a White House conference, was prepared to demand that "all red tape be cut" to set the huge movement under way immediately.

More millions to be poured into homes was indicated by a report of Federal Housing Administration Stewart McDonald who said the FHA had broken all monthly records with a gross business of $100,000,000 in March, 40 per cent over the same month last year. More than $95,000,000 was in home mortgages.

The President worked on his message to Congress on the "critical" railroad situation. Opposed to subsidies, he will attempt to win relief for the carriers through other means.

Income tax receipts gave the Federal government

SUPT. LANG OF WESTBORO HOSPITAL TO RESIGN

Superintendent Walter E. Lang, of the Westboro State Hospital, whose administration has been under fire for some time, will offer his resignation to the hospital trustees at a meeting next Thursday, it was learned exclusively today by the Boston Evening American.

At the same time it was disclosed that two high officials at the institution, who resigned after charges of inefficiency had been lodged against them last January, are still employed at Westboro in their original capacities.

They are Steward Pearl I. Wiley and Head Farmer Raymond L. Whitney, who were charged with inefficiency by State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley after he had conducted an investigation of the institution.

Lang, it was learned, submitted his resignation two weeks ago. It was in the hands of one of the trustees when the board met at that time, but because there were not enough members to act on it, action was delayed.

Revelation that Wiley and Whitney were still employed at the hospital led to immediate action by Buckley, who demanded an explanation from Acting Superintendent Clifton T. Perkins of the State Department of Mental Diseases.

Queried on this, Buckley admitted asking Dr. Perkins for the reason of their continued employment, but said he had not yet received an answer.

Snow for City Still in Doubt

May Come Tomorrow, Cold to Continue

It's still possible—but nothing definite—that the snow promised for Greater Boston the past few days may fall tomorrow, weather officials reported today.

Meanwhile, near freezing weather was forecast for tonight. In Providence weather officials reported that a 26-year-old record for cold for today was broken when the thermometer reached 27 degrees.

Passers-by stopped and looked at a fountain in the city—icicles two feet long hung from the rim.

Northeast storm warnings continued along the coast and a storm over northwestern Tennessee was reported moving northeastward reaching the southern New England coast tonight.

Coastal Defenses Backed in House

Four New England Cities to Share In Plans for Aerial Protection

WASHINGTON, April 8—A drive was launched in the House today to ratify a $42,590,000 increase in the $490,000,000 army bill providing for additional harbor and air defenses.

The increase has already been approved by the Senate. The money will be used to strengthen defenses in many coastal cities, including Boston, Portland, Portsmouth and New Bedford.

The drive was led by Rep. Maverick (D.), Texas. Maverick declared the increase was justified on "humanitarian grounds" because it marked the first real effort of Congress to provide protection for helpless civilian populations against the menace of aerial bombardments.

The increase, aside from harbor protection, he explained, would fully arm four regular army and ten national guard anti-aircraft regiments, while setting up reserve equipment for 20 more emergency regiments, all scattered throughout the nation.

Maverick said the six principal points that need immediately appropriation are Boston, Narragansett Bay, Long Island Sound proper, New York city, Delaware and Chesapeake Bay.

Smedley Butler Scores "Navy Growth for Bluff"

WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—Major General Smedley Butler, former commander of the Marine Corps, told the Senate naval committee today he believed the administration naval expansion bill was "proposed for the purpose of international bluff."

"The American people are going to wake up soon and turn on this bill before we can lay a keel," he said.

"I have the feeling," he added, "that the expanded navy proposed in this bill is intended to do something else's else work."

Committee members questioning Butler about national defense problems heard him declare that the Panama canal should be "internationalized" and kept open by the nations of the world.

The canal, he said, could be destroyed by a handful of bombs.

"I know. I helped build it," he remarked.

Butler said he had evolved a theory of forcing Americans to trade abroad at their own risk during "15 years I spent running around the world guarding Standard Oil Company ties."

"I've been on 14 expeditions persecuting little South American countries in the interest of Wall Street and the whole thing's a racket," he declared.

Butler asserted that the reduced American forces remaining in China "invited" some overt act on the part of "some red-haired Japanese."

"Some diplomat will get slapped and he will leome and cry about it," Butler rasserted. "I've been out there a long time (in China) and nobody ever slapped a marine—at least he never slapped him twice."

DISCUSSION ON BILL

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, and Charles Edson, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, discussed the naval expansion bill with President Roosevelt today.

As they left the White House, Edison told reporters he thought two battleships slated for construction this year, would go slightly over 35,000-ton limit fixed by the London naval treaty.

Quinn Urges Huge Naval Base for R. I.

WASHINGTON, April 8 (INS)—Metamorphosis of the peaceful town of Narragansett, R. I., into a bustling naval center, bristling with warships and drydocks—in short, an American Singapore—has been urged on President Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt revealed today at his press conference that Governor Quinn of Rhode Island had made the suggestion.

The President said he had forwarded Quinn's plan to the Navy Department for study.

German Trained Troops Bring China Victory

Drive Japanese Back On a 60-Mile Front At Taierhchwang

SHANGHAI, April 8 (AP)—Chinese, rushing fresh German-trained divisions into the 60-mile front across southern Shantung province, avowed today that victory was theirs at battered, shell-torn Taierhchwang.

The Chinese hailed troops of General Sun Lin-Chung's 31st division as heroes for pushing Japanese from Taierhchwang's northeast gate.

Chinese said the major remaining Japanese force was being attacked by General Sun's two other columns, spread out in a triangle east from Taierhchwang.

Japanese, however, said their forces still remained within the city.

The German trained divisions were from China's ever available reservoir of man power, and the Chinese high command predicted 40 divisions would be in the field by summer.

Japanese, however, also were reinforcing their lines on this Central China front. Foreign sources reported that within the past two weeks 50,000 fresh troops landed at Dairen, Manchoukuo, some destined for that Japanese-advised state and some for the North China front.

Chinese claims to victory about Taierhchwang listed capture of 30 tanks, 900 machine-guns, 10,000 rifles and 77 artillery pieces. There were 15,000 Japanese casualties, Chinese asserted.

3-Nation Warship Conference Set

LONDON, April 8 (AP)—The United States, Britain and France will begin consultations April 12 on the question of battleship tonnage arising from invocation of the escalator clause of the 1936 London naval treaty, an informed source said today.

U. S. Survivor of Spain War Tells Toll of Americans

Communists Keep Bloody Struggle Going, Natives Want Peace, He Says

PERPIGNAN, France, at the Spanish Frontier, April 8—An uncensored story of horrible warfare—8500 Americans killed, wounded or captured—tumbled today from the lips of an American survivor who reached here from war-torn Spain.

He is 37-year-old John G. Honeycombe, Los Angeles, California, whose story of death among his American comrades, far different than the "official" version, filtered through the Barcelona censor, reached the outside world for the first time.

Tattered, hungry and showing effects of two wounds he received in battle, Honeycombe had served as political commissar for the Washington and Lincoln Battalion of one of the Spanish government's international brigades.

500 SURVIVORS

"Only about 500 Americans have survived the offensive drive of General Franco," he said and then added, piecingly:

"Franco's flying buddies out of Spain. If they try to get out they will be shot as deserters. It was the chosen plan."

Honeycombe said the American survivors cannot get out over the Pyrenees at Marty, French Communist deputy in charge of the International Bridge at Barcelona. He declared that even the secretary of state at Spain's capital had been powerless to act "over Marty's head."

Painting a picture of demoralization and inefficiency among the refugee said:

"Americans have been placed against a wall and shot for the slightest insubordination."

REDS KEEP WAR GOING

He charged that only the Communist element wants to keep on fighting in Spain.

"The International Internationale is the only thing which keeps this war going,' the Californian said. "Spain's people are tired of war."

The Californian said there was plenty of Russian equipment used by the Loyalists.

Honeycombe was in charge of the 560 Americans of the Washington and Lincoln Battalion when was trapped in the path of General Franco's offensive at Gandesa, which fell last Saturday.

NERVES SHATTERED

His nerves shattered from the horrible experience, he managed to cross the frontier into France.

He said that it took him four or five days of hitch-hiking and walking to reach this French frontier village. He still wore his khaki uniform. Holes in his trousers showed shrapnel wounds he had received last month at the battle at Belchite.

Honeycombe, declaring he had once worked in the American Communist party, said he had signed up to go to Spain in Los Angeles at the office of the North American committee to aid Spanish Democracy. He sailed last August 16.

"I went in knowing that I was going to fight," he said, "so I have no complaint on that score."

LEFT WIFE, CHILD

He declared he "believed in the cause" enough to leave his wife and a six-year-old daughter behind. He said his wife worked in a Hollywood studio under her maiden name.

"I remember the last thing my wife said to me when I left her and my kid in Los Angeles," Honeycombe mused. "She told me, 'You'll regret the day you left for Spain.'

"She was right."

Beginning to tell his story of his entrance to Spain and the action that followed, he said:

"At Le Havre they took our passports. Luckily I had served in the merchant marine and had kept my seaman's card. Otherwise I would have been unable to reach the frontier today.

TAKEN ACROSS MOUNTAINS

"We were taken to the Pyrenees border at ...nts de Mollo whence we made a 15-hour trip across the mountains to Figueras, thence to Albacete where we were enlisted.

"Being a classified pilot, I thought that they would give me a plane as they promised in Los Angeles. But I was told that they were gradually withdrawing foreign pilots, chiefly Russians, and replacing them with Spaniards.

"I was assigned as a scout observer in the 15th international brigade, of which the Lincoln-Washington battalion formed a part. After a fortnight of training near Albacete, I was sent to Quinto at the end of September and saw my first action at Puentes de Ebro on October 13.

"The American Lincoln-Washington and Canadian Mackenzie-Papineau battalions took part.

WEAK SUPPORT

"I mention my first engagement because it shows how inefficiently we were supported by the Spaniards.

"Capt. Phil Detro, commander of our outfit, was the only efficient man among the lot. The attack was set for noon but the artillery failed to lay down a barrage and when we finally attacked at 1:15, we were thrown back with 328 casualties."

On New Year's Day, Honeycombe said that he was in the Teruel sector between Caladas and Cuevas Labradas.

He said the men had worn out their shoes and that they fought with pieces of sheepskin around their feet.

EXPOSURE KILLS MANY

"A number died of exposure," he related.

At Teruel, Honeycombe said, he was wounded twice, in the left ankle and in the right knee.

"By mistakes," he said, "we were ordered into no-man's land and caught in a rebel pincer movement.

"I will never forget March 9, when the rebel offensive broke. I was in the Belchite sector. What seemed like hundreds of rebel bombers zoomed overhead and rebel artillery laid down a six-hour barrage.

"I received orders to retire from my post atop Monastery Hill. As I did so I carried a comrade named Reece from New York, who had been wounded. I must have carried him more than 400 yards before I realized he was dead.

"I was myself wounded and instructed to go to the base hospital.

JAILED FOR PLEA

"There was an open pisin before us, all the way to Hijar, which the rebels had just bombed. I struggled along and, hitch-hiking, reached Barcelona.

"En route I encountered the bombardment at Caspe. Together with Norman Selby, a West Point graduate from Baltimore, we weathered it in a cellar.

"In Barcelona I went to the office of the Under Secretary of War, demanding repatriation. I was told that International Brigade headquarters would first have to approve. I went there and was promptly jailed, although my six months' enlistment long since was up and I was wounded to boot.

"I eventually was taken under guard to Batea, beyond Gandesa. They left me with 17 others in the open without blankets. It was raining hard.

AT FRONT UNARMED

"We were reduced to starvation rations. Just a little rice and no wine and no water for 72 hours. We were marched as prisoners toward the front without arms and left in artillery positions just blown up by rebel bombs.

"There we were told we had been given six months for various offenses without any trial—I for applying to the Barcelona War Office for repatriation—and we were marched off to the front lines still without weapons. Our hands were tied and were unbound only in the trenches.

"But we could not fight with our bare hands and when hell broke loose from the enemy side all we could do was to run for our lives. I have not seen my buddies from that group since.

"They included Henry Baskowski of New York, commander of Company I, cited for bravery in former actions.

"I managed to get lifts north, giving Barcelona a wide berth, and I eventually boarded a train at Granollers and reached Portbou, where I was able to talk myself across the frontier by showing my sailor's certificate, pretending to be a sailor who had gone on a spree and had been left behind by his ship."

Premier Blum Resigns In New French Crisis

adjourned and it was declared that the vote stood as final rejection of the premier's measures.

Blum declared that dictatorial powers over the nation's finance and economy formed the only solution of France's difficulties, and that if the senate refused them to him they would have to give them to another government.

He said the majority supporting him in the Chamber of Deputies—which gave his bill grudging approval Wednesday, 31 to 250—was "founded on the masses of the country in a movement of great scope."

He declared it "improper that the constitution should give the upper House the same rights as the Chamber elected by universal suffrage . . .

1000 GUARDS

"The working class has awakened to its rights."

Guarded by more than 1000 police and mobile guards, the Senate began the debate on Blum's bill.

The guard detachments were stronger than those which yesterday broke up a Leftist attempt to demonstrate before the Luxembourg Palace, the Senate building. They carried carbines and wore steel helmets.

Blum, facing the hostile Senate to fight for his proposals, declared that dictatorial powers over French finance and economy were the only solution to the nation's troubles.

SEES EVENTUAL VICTORY

He said Parliament would be forced to give them to another government if they refused them to him.

The Socialist premier flatly accused the senators of refusing his finance bill simply because they wanted to throw him out.

"You are not objecting to my program but to me," he charged.

"Of course! Of course!" senators shouted back.

When Blum declared the bill would pass the senate easily if his arch enemy, 74-year-old Joseph Caillaux, the finance committee's chairman, had presented it, there was an answering chorus of "Naturally!"

BLUM BITTER

Blum became increasingly bitter as his speech continued. Senators seemed to delight in interrupting him. At one point after Blum had accused the senators of wrecking his cabinet, which he declared was founded on the will of the people, senators stood and pounded their desks to drown him out.

President Jules Jeanneney pounded with his gavel to restore order, then declared:

"This man came here to defend his bill. After he is through he will have to take the consequences of his words."

After another heated passage Jeanneney said, turning gravely to Blum, "the Senate is the high assembly of the republic."

Shortly after 5 p.m. (10 a. m. E. S. T.) Abel Gardey, reporter of the Senate Finance Committee—which yesterday rejected Blum's finance bill by 25 to 6—took the rostrum to read the committee's report.

"The bill does not correspond in certain of its aspects to the spirit of French democracy," Gardey read. It underestimates the moral and material forces of the nation. It is not founded on the solidarity of all citizens.

"It disturbs the Frenchman, with his innate taste for liberty and initiative."

Second Franco Army Smashes Way to Sea

Troops Threaten to Flank Government Divisions

HENDAYE, France, at the Spanish Frontier, April 8 (AP)—A second contingent of General Franco's Insurgents smashed its way to within sight of Spain's east coast today as widespread and deadly combat surged along all the Catalan front.

Galicians fought their way to control of Mount Turmell, less than 18 miles downhill to Vinaros on the Mediterranean.

This column on the far southern Catalan front threatened the flank of embattled government divisions held at bay for three days by the Insurgent force attempting to take Tortosa, 28 miles by road to the north.

Among the government defenders at Tortosa was the famous Lister Brigade, named for a carpenter-general.

Forty miles north of Lerida, General Solchaga's army struck directly into Catalonia and took Tremp, occupying the important power center and cutting two high tension lines which supplied electric current to Barcelona's vital war industries.

Insurgent red and gold banners fluttered in town after town as Insurgent armies rolled through at least a dozen villages of the upper Noguera Pallaresa valley.

Insurgent officers at Irun declared the swift capture of the 90-foot high, 660-foot long dam at Tremp scotched government plans to send a huge flood of 7,000,000,000 cubic feet of water roaring down the Segre and Ebro river valleys.

The officers said their troops found huge quantities of dynamite to be used in blasting the dam to release a lake of water approximately six miles long and two miles wide.

At Zaragoza, Insurgent Aragon headquarters announced 289 villages and towns with a normal population of 343,213 had been occupied in less than a month.

MADRID, April 8 (AP)—Thirty-eight recruiting offices opened in Madrid today to handle volunteers expected to respond to the government's call for enlistment of 100,000 more men.

Recruits were lined up in front of many offices before they opened today. The recruiting campaign was being stimulated by parades of volunteers already signed up.

'Kill Hitler' Plan Bared In Vienna

Nazi Police Hunt Distributors of Handbills

VIENNA, April 8 (INS)—German secret police combed Vienna today, seeking mysterious printed handbills threatening the life of Chancellor Hitler.

The bills were distributed in several sections of the city, chiefly around the Parliament building where the Vienna Nazi administration is centered.

They contained the single typewritten line:

"Hitler will not leave Vienna alive."

Authorities here assumed they had been issued by a "subversive Communist group which has not yet been rooted out."

Only a few of the handbills were distributed. Similar bills were spread in Graz four days ago when Chancellor Hitler made an Austrian plebiscite campaign speech there.

It also was discovered that unknown persons, pretending to be government officials, intruded into the homes of citizens in several sections of Vienna, demanding passports and identification papers.

This usual precautionary visit is taken when Hitler enters Vienna.

Authorities said the authors of the handbills probably were members of a "small group of malcontents."

Catholic Papers Support Nazis

BERLIN, April 8 (AP)—The Catholic weekly papers of the Berlin and Breslau dioceses have published appeals to Catholics to support the Nazi regime in Sunday's plebiscite on Austro-German union.

The Berlin appeal said nothing directly regarding union of Austria and Germany. It especially emphasized Nazi achievements on behalf of social welfare and an increased birthrate.

The Breslau appeal told parishioners that the thesis of the Catholic Austrian State could not stand in the face of political realities.

Vienna, the paper said, it is up to Breslau Catholics "at the eleventh hour to correct their prejudices in favor of well undefended interests of our entire nation."

Jungle Honeymoon Finishes in Court

Famous Explorer Sued by Bride For Separation

LAKEWOOD, N. J., April 8 —The "jungle honeymoon" marriage of beautiful Dorothy Copp Mitchell-Hedges, Maine beauty, was headed toward the courts today.

Wife of Frederick Albert Mitchell-Hedges, famous explorer, blonde Dorothy has discovered, she said, that the golden prospect of finding out about strange territory assumes a very drab hue when put into actual practice.

So she had sued for a separation from her hubby.

LIMIT TO LOVE

It was all very well at first, she opined, what with the glamour surrounding the takeoff of exploration expeditions and all, but 18 months in snake-infested South American swamps convinced her that there's a limit to even love.

Dorothy stood up for her rights when her husband planned on taking a South African exploration jaunt. She wouldn't go. But he did. And Dorothy promptly brought an abandonment charge in her separation suit.

The marriage in 1935 was blasoned as an epic adventure when Mrs. Mitchell-Hedges announced she would honeymoon amidst "jungle dangers."

JUNGLE DISCOMFORTS

What she didn't know at that time was that the "dangers" were supplemented by a good deal of discomfort, including living with half-clad savages, getting out of the way of alligator snaps and trying to drink tea filled with bugs.

Furthermore, they were always talking about the "ants" which kept her in constant turmoil. She learned that South American ants sometimes travel in armies and that explorers would rather almost anything than to be caught in their path.

"When I heard that, it was unbearable," Mrs. Mitchell-Hedges said, "I woke up at night fancying I was going to be eaten alive."

AND THE SNAKES!

Then, too, there were the snakes, who were expert at concealing themselves and making unexpected appearances at the most embarrassing moments. All in all, it wasn't Dorothy's idea of romance.

So, when hubby took her back to civilization and, then suggested a South African trip, with the added dangers of head-hunters and poison darts, Mrs. Mitchell-Hedges balked.

Birth Pictures Block Magazine Sale in Boston

Agents Refuse to Cut Four Pages From Publication

A widely-circulated national weekly pictorial magazine, showing four pages of photographs of the birth of a baby, failed to appear on Boston newsstands today.

A short time afterward City Court Judge Thomas Sullivan in New Haven overruled a ban by Police Chief Philip T. Smith and decided that the current issue could be sold on the newsstands.

It was believed to be the first legal test in New England. The New England judge discharged the case against Samuel Matloff, 30, a dealer who sold a copy of the magazine to Charles Ewart, Yale football star.

"I wouln't hesitate to show the pictures to my own son," Judge Sullivan said.

DISTRIBUTION HALTED

In Boston, it was explained that the magazine agents refused to supply distributors with the issue on the grounds they had "no right to mutilate" any of the pages.

Police Commissioner Timilty ordered the pages deleted yesterday and the distributors had agreed to do this before placing the magazine on sale.

Similar action was taken by police authorities in other cities throughout New England.

In the Bronx borough of New York City, officials ordered all copies of the issue seized. Authorities said the illustrations were in violation of the penal code.

Cities surrounding Boston were reported selling the magazine without any deletion.

LEAHY WEIGHS BAN

In Cambridge, Police Chief Timothy F. Leahy bought six copies, but explained he was going to distribute them to members of the detergence squad "for study." He said he would announce later in the day whether he would order the magazine withdrawn from the stands.

After glancing at the pictures, he said:

"In my opinion, the photographs are a scientific study and have helpful knowledge for married people.

"From a child's viewpoint, however, it's bad stuff for them to be looking at."

Pulitzer Prize Poet Divorced

MRS. CLARRISSA L. AIKEN

Mrs. Clarrissa L. Aiken, of Shepard street, Cambridge, was granted an uncontested divorce in Suffolk probate court today from Conrad P. Aiken, author-poet and Pulitzer prize winner in 1929.

According to affidavits filed with her divorce libel, Mrs. Aiken charged unfaithfulness with a "person, known as Mary Hoover of Ellwood street, Charlestown." Miss Hoover was described as an artist.

Mrs. Aiken testified she was married in February, 1930. She told of two trips that she made to England with her husband and said they separated in August, 1936.

Gordon Bassett, of Marlborough street, Back Bay, a witness, testified he knew both Mrs. Aiken and her husband.

He quoted Aiken as telling him he was "not getting along with wife."

Bassett also testified Aiken told him he was living with a Miss Hoover in Charlestown and that he had become "very interested in her."

Another witness, Richard Blackmar of Cambridge street, West End, testified he once asked Miss Hoover where the telephone in her house was located and she replied:

"In our bedroom."

Judge John V. Mahoney ordered Aiken to pay his wife $500. Aiken was at one time a professor at Harvard, but resigned in 1928. He was awarded the Pulitzer prize for the best volume of verse.

Lawrence Girl Asks $100,000 Heart Balm

Says Sausage Worker Aided in Buying Of Furniture

LAWRENCE, April 8—Only six months before he married another girl, the man she is suing for $100,000 in a breach of promise action aided her in picking out furniture for their "new home," it was declared today by Miss Stefaney F. Paciorek, 22, of Haverhill street.

A week ago Miss Stefaney filed her suit in superior court at Salem against John J. Snigorski, 39, wealthy sausage maker who had wooed her for seven years, from the time she was 15, according to her story.

That story she told today in the office of her counsel, James J. Sullivan—her brown eyes snapping in an attractive face.

TELLS OF PROPOSAL

A graduate of Lawrence High school in 1934, the slim brunette said she first met Snigorski when her mother invested money in the sausage and meat packing business he conducts, known as Essex Packing Company.

Although he then was more than twice her age he took a keen interest in her, the girl said, and saw her almost continually from then on.

Three years later, when she was 18, he definitely proposed marriage, she claimed, and from then on kept her busy with three visits a week and many telephone calls.

So much of her time did he take up, she said, that she never had any other boy friend.

BOUGHT FURNITURE

Only 13 months ago, according to Miss Stefaney, he took her on a trip to New York, went with her in one of Manhattan's best stores and told her to select furniture for their new home in Haverhill. She did so and he helped, the girl declared.

It was a shock when a friend, last fall, called her attention to a newspaper article about Christmas time, the article stating that Snigorski and a Valeria Szatt of Lowell had been married.

As a result Miss Stefaney suffered a nervous breakdown, she claims, and could not continue her work as a store clerk.

Couple Indicted In Back Bay Break

Indicted for breaking and entering and other alleged offenses, a Boston man and woman today were held in bail of $10,000 each in Suffolk Superior Court for trial next Wednesday.

Both pleaded innocent. They were Nicholas Geraigery, 25, of Harrison avenue, South End, and Mrs. Josephine Brickman, 37, of Cedar street, Roxbury. They were arrested following an attempt to rob the Molineaux Wine Company on Lansdowne street, Back Bay, last month.

Roosevelt Signs Cambridge Award

President Roosevelt today signed a bill directing payment of $3675 to Edward F. Cassidy of Cambridge for injuries received when he was struck by a mail truck in Cambridge on February 24, 1930, according to word from Washington.

Cassidy, brother of School Committeeman Dr. James J. Cassidy, is a teacher at the vocational school and resides with his mother in 199 Lexington avenue, Cambridge.

Senator Carroll Withdraws in Sheriff Race

By ALFRED D. WHELTON

Senator Edward C. Carroll of South Boston today definitely withdrew from the contest for sheriff of Suffolk County.

The South Boston solon, Democratic leader in the upper branch of the legislature, will seek a fourth term to that office.

His announcement gave answer to a two-fold question when he added that the reason for seeking a fourth term in the Senate was information reaching him that Sheriff John A. Keliher would again be a candidate.

SHERIFF IS ILL

Sheriff Keliher has been ill for some time and had made no definite decision regarding a contest for another term.

As far back as the "night before" banquet of the South Boston Citizens' Association on the eve of March 17, Senator Carroll stated he would not oppose Keliher.

The only candidate in the field against Keliher at the moment, therefore, is City Councillor John F. Dowd of Roxbury, who was announcement candidate against Keliher last election.

Senator Carroll is generally regarded in the Senate as "spokesman" for Governor Hurley.

LED "JOBS" FIGHT

His most recent tussle with that body of 27 Republicans to 13 Democrats was in leading the fight of his colleagues against the order to investigate "gift jobs" in the offices of the Unemployment Compensation Commission.

With his neighboring senator, Thomas M. Burke of Dorchester, he carried the brunt of the losing argument against the order.

One opponent is already in the field for the senatorship now held by Carroll. He is Patrick J. "Sonny" McDonough, who has attained considerable popularity in the peninsular district.

Gary Cooper Scares Monster

More Fun Than Chamber of Commerce

By PAUL GALLICO
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, April 8 (INS)—My Dear City Editor: All right, so I didn't cover the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, as assigned! So what!

So I went over to Madison Square Garden and saw Gary Cooper scare the daylights out of Gargantua the Great. I saw ladies in spangles and ladies in tights, and elephants, and a feller walking around with a tiger on a leash, and a lion walking around with a feller on a leash.

Nobody is walking around with Gargantua on a leash. Neither was anybody walking around with Gary Cooper on a leash. Mrs. Gary Cooper was there too, but she said she doesn't need a leash.

FUN WORTH JOB LOSS

All right, so fire me. I had fun.

Do you see guys in funny hats leading giraffes around by a string at the Chamber of Commerce meeting? Or Frank Buck in a green fedora hat riding on an elephant in a wicker basket? Or llamas? Why you can't even spell llamas.

The circus opens today. I sneaked in to take a quick gander at the dress rehearsal yesterday afternoon. I was going to go on down to the Chamber of Commerce, honest, after a while.

Gary Cooper and the missus came in to take some candid camera shots of that big chimp they have this year, Gargantua the Great, the gorilla born in the Belgian Congo, but educated in Flatbush. They all wind up in Brooklyn sooner or later.

THREAT TO GARGANTUA

I knew you wouldn't want me to miss it when they unveiled Gary Cooper for the gorilla. The gorilla had been living for that moment all week. The gorilla got tough last week and bit his trainer and the only way they could make him behave was to say:

"All right, any more trouble out of you and you don't get to see Gary Cooper."

GARY COOPER
He Stared

GARGANTUA
He Shivered

You know, circus people are funny. They spend their lives being gaped at by crowds. But when there's an attraction they stand and rubber just like anyone else. They came out in droves, in their costumes and spangles and make-up to see Gargantua get his look at Cooper.

Cooper wore a grey overcoat with the collar turned up and a soft hat. Gargantua wore a fur coat. He was in the little end-pen of his air-conditioned travelling cage. Cooper stood in front of the cage waiting. Two dozen photographers focused on Cooper.

The trap was sprung and Gargantua came bounding out into the big cage, took one look at Cooper and retired to a corner shivering.

Then he came back and took another look and got sore. He got madder than all git-out, bounced around, bared his teeth and complained bitterly. Mrs. Cooper walked up to the cage. Gargantua thought that was fine.

Wait until you get a load of the costuming of the circus this year, Chamber of Commerce my eye.

Son Jim Defied In Aggressive Hurley Talk

Governor Hurley today shouted defiance to James Roosevelt and other New Deal forces he charges were attempting to supplant him, following a bristling speech at Chicopee Falls.

The governor reiterated his challenge to members of his party to halt his renomination and election with the declaration that the voters resent interference by "a dictator 500 miles away."

Hurley similarly branded James Roosevelt as a "dictator" in his address to Chicopee Kiwanians.

HITS AT TACTICS

He declared the governorship of Massachusetts was not on the auction block and long-range Washington tactics would have little effect at the polls.

"Whatever others may care to do," the governor said, "I will do my utmost with my conscience as my guide.

"I will be no Charlie McCarthy allowing others to pull the strings and make my lips move in statements which are against the best interests of my state.

"STAND IS CLEAR"

"I have made it clear that I am opposed to the child labor amendment to the federal constitution. I have made my position clear with reference to the trade agreements and flood control.

"I will stand by those positions, even though they may not be pleasing to some dictator 500 miles away. I am completely confident that the governship is not on the auction block, no matter what some persons may believe is the case."

Mother Jailed With Baby Wants Custody of 3 Girls

Plans Battle After Serving 3-Month Term for Neglect

From her Salem jail cell where she is serving three months sentence for neglect of her children, Mrs. Beatrice Dodier, 34, of Haverhill, today vowed to wage a battle with the state for custody of her small daughters when she is liberated.

In her arms she clutched her tiny six-months-old daughter Joan, to whose care she will spend most of her imprisonment, time, as she disclosed in her plans to battle the state authorities for her children.

"I have no friends and have absolutely destitute, but I've tried to be a good mother," she said.

"When I was faced with this charge of neglect, I never dreamed the authorities would send me to jail. I have two brothers in Canada who can help me and when I am free they will aid me in getting back my little girls."

$16 A WEEK FOR SIX

For a while the welfare allotted her $16 a week, Mrs. Dodier said, for herself and five daughters. Two quarts of milk a day, $4 weekly for rent, $2 each 10 days for oil, $2 a month for lights and the cost of food and clothing more than used up her allowance, she stated.

Then her mother's aid was cut off and she was forced to look for work, she continued, adding:

"When I tried to do WPA work they made me quit because they said I wasn't able to take proper care of my kiddies."

Her children are Rosanna, 15; Margaret, 8; Frances, 6; Joyce, 3 and Joan. Another elder daughter is married. Mrs. Dodier's husband is not living.

CRIB IN CELL

Meanwhile, little Joan sleeps in a crib in her mother's cell because Mrs. Dodier wanted to care for her little one.

Women inmates of the jail are finding their dull days behind bars brightened as they vie with each other in helping wash and iron the baby's clothing at the jail laundry. Authorities provide orange juice, baby syrup and cod liver oil for the infant's diet.

"I realize it's cruel for my little one to have to come to jail, and I worry because there is so little fresh air for her here," the mother said, "but I just couldn't bear to leave her."

HOPES FOR TRANSFER

She expressed hope she may be transferred to Sherborn women's reformatory, where the facilities of a well-equipped maternity ward can provide better protection for the child's health during the three-month stay behind bars.

Mrs. Dodier, whose home is in Temple place, Haverhill, was found guilty in district court of neglect. The law permits children under 18 months to accompany a mother to jail.

In her "crib" made from two chairs, from the sheriff's office, six-months-old Joan Dodier is shown in this exclusive picture "gurgling" happily at mealtime, in Salem jail, while her widowed mother, Mrs. Beatrice Dodier, looks on with a smile. The mother, sentenced to three months for neglect of her children, plans to battle for their custody again, once she is released. The baby was placed with the mother in the cell under the law that permits children under 18 months to accompany a mother to jail.

Thirteen Swept To Death in Georgia

Die as Flood-Filled Creek Crumbles General Store

WHITESTONE, Ga., April 8 (INS)—Thirteen persons, 10 of them children, were swept to death early today as a small creek—made into a roaring river by torrential rains—washed away a combination home and store building here.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Conner and their eight children — Forrest, James, Harold, Claude, Eugene, Mildred, Oleeta and Flora Sue; Carl Lindsey, 22, and Thelma and Bonnie Ponder, small daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Will Ponder.

The Conner children ranged in age from 8 months to 16 years.

The two Ponder children were visiting the Connor children and it was the first night they had ever spent away from their parental roof.

Several hours after the tragedy occurred the bodies of Claude and Flora Sue, their father and an unidentified child were found about two miles down stream from the scene of the tragedy.

The combination store and residence was tumbled into the stream by the raging current around midnight, but due to disrupted telephone lines and blocked highways residents were unable to communicate with the outside world for several hours.

The tragedy was witnessed by Ponder, who made a heroic but futile effort to rescue his own children and the Conner family.

Alabama Maps Fight Against Flood's Force

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 8 (AP)—Alabama marshalled its defenses hastily today while thousands fled homes in the path of what threatened to be the state's worst flood.

The flood menace rose with spectacular speed in the wake of a series of tornadoes, one of which killed 11 persons yesterday at Alicesville.

o

Prattville and Wetumpka, both in central Alabama, were focal danger points today as Governor Graves called out national guardsmen to aid in evacuating residents.

Record breaking stages were forecast on hte state's major streams—the Alabama and Tombigbee—and tremendous damage was in prospect.

Wetumpka's crisis was expected tmorrow and Sunday, with the Coosa still rising.

AFL on March In Coast Strike

CROCKETT, Cal., April 8—More than 10,000 members of the American Federation of Labor today prepared to march on Crockett to bring "peace and harmony" at the California-Hawaiian Sugar Refinery, strike-bound in a controversy with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The AFL group was recruited from building trades workers in the San Francisco East Bay area and told by Roland Watson, personal representative of William F. Green, AFL head, to be ready "for an emergency."

CIO leaders declared the march was an attempt to incite a riot and ordered their forces out of Crockett for the day. Sheriff John Miller declared no attempt would be made to halt the march.

The plant closed down 28 days ago when CIO members began picketing the refinery.

CIO Shoe Plant Protest Aired

AUBURN, Me., April 8—Presentation of evidence in a complaint by the CIO against the Merry Shoe Company, Lewiston, was scheduled to begin here today before a National Labor Relations board.

The complaint is the first ever filed on the question of a manufacturer's right to sign a closed shop contract before opening a new factory.

The complaint contends the Merry Shoe Company is the old Morphy Shoe Company, whose employes voted CIO as their bargaining agent.

The CIO asserts the change in name was a company move to void a CIO contract.

President Roosevelt's Own Story:

Tells How Farmers Favored AAA That High Court Killed

Processing Taxes Given Then Until Ruling Nullified Relief Law

ARTICLE NO. 15

ON THE AAA (III)

A Comment of Franklin D. Roosevelt From His Forthcoming Books

Editor's Note—The AAA, quickly organized and put into effect early in the New Deal, as described in previous articles, functioned on a vast scale for three years. But in January, 1936, a sweeping Supreme Court decision made the huge structure suddenly illegal.

(Following is President Roosevelt's comment on this dramatic climax in the story of farm relief, written by himself in his "Public Papers and Addresses," and never before published).

By the end of 1935 the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, pursuant to the original act, the subsequent amendments to it, and related legislation, was following five principal methods for the adjustment of agricultural crops. These variations provided the flexibility required in the program for different products and different situations.

The various methods were: (1) voluntary reduction by agreement between the secretary of agriculture and individual farmers, (2) marketing agreements, (3) surplus removal and market expansion, (4) tax programs for compulsory control, such as the Bankhead Cotton Act and the Kerr Tobacco Act, (5) holding reserve supply of certain food, feed and fibre crops as protection from extreme price fluctuations.

Billion and Half Given to Farmers

During this three-year period, AAA had made 8,400,000 production adjustment contracts involving about 13,600,000 separate payments to farmers, and had disbursed about one and a half billion dollars.

In 1932 approximately 205,600,000 acres were producing commodities to which crop-adjustment programs were later applied. By 1935 these had been reduced to 180,129,000 acres, and of this acreage, 150,543,000 acres were covered by production adjustment contracts.

The acreage "rented" by the government, on which farm production was shifted by the program during its three years of operation, was covered by 1,626,000 contracts in 1933, 3,105,000 in 1934, and 3,400,000 in 1935.

The program was practically self-supporting. The total expenditures in anticipation of processing taxes were $1,233,435,000. The taxes actually collected fell short of that figure by about $296,000,000 which was the amount held up by court injunctions obtained by processors against the payment of the tax.

Had all of the taxes which had been assessed, $1,219,461,000, been paid, the collections would have fallen short of expenditures by only $14,000,000 Allowing for the lag between assessments and collections, it seems that the expenditures would have been fully repaid by tax collections.

As the program developed, farm leaders and farmers played a progressively important part in policy and in administration. Approximately 4600 country control associations were formed for most of the basic commodities for which voluntary adjustment plans were developed.

Farmers Vote for Production Control

In addition to these local associations, six direct referenda were taken in 1934 and 1935 among farmers of five of the basic commodities—wheat, cotton, tobacco, corn and hogs. Votes were cast in these referenda by non-signers as well as signers of adjustment contracts. The vote for continuance of production-control measures for the various commodities ranged from 67 per cent to more than 93 per cent. The total vote in these referenda was 4,288,510, of which 3,707,642 votes were in favor of continuance.

As far back as late 1934 and early 1935, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration began to plan a transition from the temporary emergency phase of the adjustment programs to a long-time phase, which would give a larger place to soil conservation and improved farm management practices.

That policy was discussed by me in a speech on October 25, 1935. It had been the subject of discussions over many months with representatives of farmers, with agricultural colleges and with extension workers in a series of regional conferences in 1935.

On January 6, 1936, the United States Supreme Court in the case of United States vs. Butler, et al, receivers of Hoosac Mills Corporation, declared unconstitutional the production control activities carried on by means of contracts and processing tax provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and brought the farmers' program as it was then operating to a stop.

Amendments had been made to the Agricultural Adjustment Act on August 24, 1935, intended, among other things, to safeguard the act so far as possible against attacks based on the case of Schechter Poultry Corp. vs. United States, which on May 27, 1935, struck down the code-making provisions of NIRA as unconstitutional.

They sought to do this by bringing more clearly under the power to regulate interstate commerce the various provisions of the act and by providing more specific standards for administrative action.

The amendments, with these ends in view, defined, specified and limited in great detail the authority which had been delegated by the Congress to the Secretary of Agriculture, so that it could not be said, pursuant to the Schechter decision, that there had been an unconstitutional delegation of legislative powers. The Secretary was directed, rather than authorized, to put into effect certain specified corrective measures and was permitted to use his discretion only in the choice of the corrective measures specified by the Congress.

Amendments Fail To Cure Defects

References to interstate commerce were redefined, and operation of the act was sought to be brought vigorously within the limits of the interstate commerce clause.

The marketing agreement provisions of the amended statute were different from the original Agricultural Adjustment Act. The broad and general powers which had been granted to the Secretary of Agriculture under the original act were limited.

There were a number of additional strengthening and clarifying provisions inserted in this new statute which had no relationship to any judicial controversy as to its constitutionality.

The changes, however, were held by the Supreme Court of the United States, in Rickert Rice Mills, Inc. vs. Fontenot, not to have cured "the infirmities of the original act which were the basis of the decision in U. S. vs Butler," which declare1 the original act unconstitutional.

The later decision stated that "the exaction still lacks the quality of a true tax" and that "it remains a means for effectuating the regulation of agricultural production, a matter not within the powers of Congress."

Instead of terminating the farmers' efforts permanently, however, the decision of the Supreme Court in the Hoosac Mills case had the effect of hastening the transition from the emergency phase to the long-time phase which had been planned. The decision, when it came, precipitated as a sudden change that which had been planned as a gradual one.

For on February 29, 1936—less than two months after the Court's decision—the Congress enacted a new law to replace the invalidated portions of AAA. The new law was the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, which I signed on February 29, 1936.

Compulsory crop control as a corollary part of the AAA and the Administration's agricultural plan is discussed by Mr. Roosevelt tomorrow in the 16th article of the series composing the President's own story of the New Deal.

Believes AAA Did Rescue Farming In U. S. Crisis

A Comment by President Roosevelt:

Benefits to the United States from the AAA programs, which were declared in large part unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court, were felt throughout the land almost from the beginning of the programs.

In my message of March 16, 1933, I stated that a new means would have to be found to rescue agriculture. I do not think that it is an exaggeration to say that the means adopted did rescue agriculture.

During the three years between 1933-35 the contribution of agriculture to the national income rose from 5.7 per cent to 10.3 per cent, equaling the percentage of 1929. Cash farm income rose from its low point of $4,377,000,000 in 1932 to $7,201,000,000.

It is true that this gain was offset in part by an increase in prices of things farmers had to buy. Allowing, however, for an increase of 17 per cent in prices farmers paid for all products used by them both in living and in production of crops, the purchasing power of cash income from farm production was still 41 per cent greater in 1935 than in 1932.

Tobin to Make Fund Appeal

Mayor Tobin and executives of other leading cities prepared today to urge continuance of WPA for another year at a conference with President Roosevelt at Washington.

Accompanying Mayor Tobin to Washington was City Councillor William J. Galvin of Charlestown, who will attempt to persuade the President to come here for the Bunker Hill Day celebration on June 17.

Before leaving Boston, the mayor declared that the city is now spending $14,000,000 annually in direct relief and that Federal aid must be extended for at least another year.

Mayor Tobin has many highway and other projects in mind or consideration at Washington. One of them was reported to be the proposed motor-highway through conversion of the Atlantic avenue Elevated structure. Such a highway would provide work for 2000 men.

Hull Hails Peace Of Americas

WASHINGTON, April 8 (INS)—Pan-Americanism was hailed by Secretary of State Hull today as a "symbol of unity and peace" in a world overhung by threats of war and anarchy.

Hull's address to the diplomatic representatives of the 20 Latin-American republics, who comprise the board of governors of the Pan-American union at a banquet celebrating the union's birthday, was read by Undersecretary Welles, Hesaid:

"As we view the world scene we cannot help but feel profoundly grateful that peace, firmly established, prevails on the American continent.

Gen. Johnson Says:

DIVERSITY IS KEY

Few Needy In Syracuse

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 8—This city comes nearer being depression-proof than any city I have seen. Its mayor told me that less than 5 per cent of its families are on relief.

Hugh S. Johnson

In many cities the percentage is 20 per cent. Heads of its leading industries estimate production running at 85 per cent of so-called "normal." Rates for common labor—the lowest hourly rate—are said to average 50 cents on a generally observed 40-hour week.

Relatively that is excellent. It was said with a good deal of pride that many plants preserve the old Blue Eagle practices.

There is not much unionization and very little labor trouble. Yet it is plain to see that this is a very citadel of Feudalists, Economic Royalists, modern Lord Macaulays, Tories and denizens of well-stocked clubs. Democrats are scarcer than Orangemen at a Loyal Sons of St. Patrick ball and Third New Dealers are rarer still.

The only two other towns I have seen that seem to keep an economic keel so even, are Hartford, Conn., and Mayfield, Ky., in Senator Barkley's stamping ground. Hartford is an exception. It is the center of the insurance business and that has work to do in all seasons.

* * *

The reason Syracuse and Mayfield stand so firm is plain to see. They are dependent on no one, or even a dozen, industries. They are balanced between agriculture and industry. Farming is relatively far more important to Mayfield than to Syracuse and, of course, Mayfield is much smaller. But this New York town is beautifully diversified in its industries—clusters of smaller plants, rather than mountainous masses of large ones.

I came here indirectly from Cincinnati and Detroit. The latter is very largely dependent on the concentration there of the biggest part of the automobile industry—the greatest of all our manufactures.

Cincinnati has most of the great machine-tool industry but has much more diversification than Detroit.

* * *

Looking at all these towns—precisely to the degree that they depend on a few large, rather than on many small industries, are they distressed by this depression? Detroit is the saddest city I have seen. Cincinnati is bit almost as bad.

Politics has nothing to do with it. New Deal or Old Deal has nothing to do with it. Republicans and Economic Royalists are as scarce in Mayfield as Democrats and Third New Dealers are in Syracuse. Economics is the only consideration, and diversification is the only answer to the question of stability for any city.

Of course, the rule works the other way too. When business is good and the mills run merrily, the cities of industrial concentration go ahead much farther than those of more even balance. It is very exciting and a gambler's chance is much better in the former.

* * *

But what most people seek is not excitement and high stakes at desperate hazards. They want security and stability. They get it in these smaller centers to a far greater extent that in the bigger cities—especially those dependent on a single activity.

Generally speaking (Syracuse is an exception), they pay for it in lower wages and incomes. That is a subsidiary reason for the North-South wage differential. Notwithstanding these wage variations, I find much more contentment and good living in these smaller and more stable centers.

All these are reasons why we cannot apply any coat-iron rule of wage-and-labor relations or of any other kind to a country so large and so diverse as the United States. I saw that proved over and over again in the war draft and in NRA and it impresses itself on me daily in my constant travel to all parts of this country to try to keep myself up to date with the United States for the purposes of this column.

House in Tribute To 'Dictator' Foe

WASHINGTON, April 8 (INS)—The House took a brief moment of armistice during heated debate on the reorganization bill to pay tribute to Rep. Hatton Sumners (D) Texas, who completed a quarter of a century of service in the lower chamber.

Sumners, chairman of the judiciary committee, who is credited with swinging the tide against the President's Supreme Court plan last year, took the floor to demand drastic modification of the reorganization bill.

Senate Rejects Boost in Tax On Liquor

Plan for 19 Millions In Revenue Loses To Bootleg Fears

WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—The Senate, hearing a final vote on the new revenue measure, rejected today a proposal to increase the tax on hard liquor from $2 to $2.25 a gallon.

The increase, voted in the House, was opposed by the Treasury and the Senate Finance Committee on the ground it would increase bootlegging.

Senator Frazier (R.) of North Dakota urged the Senate to approve the increase, which he said would have yielded $19,000,000.

After little more than perfunctory objections from Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the administration leader, far-reaching finance committee proposals to wipe out the undistributed profits tax and overhaul the capital gains levy were approved yesterday without a roll call.

Barkley forecast, however, that some form of the profits tax would be re-inserted by a joint conference committee which will adjust differences between Senate and House versions of the tax bill.

In general, the Senate voted to substitute a flat 18 per cent rate on corporation incomes in place of a House-approved undistributed profits tax and to levy a flat 15 per cent rate on capital gains in lieu of the House graduated scale.

Dead Man Found At Lawrence

LAWRENCE, April 8—Sprawled face down on the municipal dump, the body of an unidentified elderly man was found today.

After a preliminary examination, Medical Examiner John J. Deacy said the man apparently had suffered an attack of heart trouble and in falling had cut his head and face badly on stones and bricks.

The body was found by a boy, who called Al Vanty of Riverview court, employe of the city sanitation department who was driving a dump truck.

No marks of identification were found on the clothing, though the trousers worn are said to have been issued by the WPA.

Shrewsbury Youth Is Killed by Auto

SHREWSBURY, April 8—Earl J. Cheever, 17-year-old Shrewsbury high school student, was killed today when an automobile, allegedly driven by a Worcester high school student, went out of control and struck Cheever as he waited for a bus.

The fatality occurred at Boston Post road and Mill street in Shrewsbury.

The driver, Ralph W. Gurney, 18, lives in Maplewood avenue, Marlboro, but attends North high school, Worcester.

The three defendants, Emile and Raymond Cavedon, brothers, and Leger Toll, watchman, remained undisturbed in the dock.

NEW YORK, April 8 (AP)—The National Broadcasting Company said today that middle west blizzards of the last few days have snapped landlines and disrupted communications.

10 Per Cent Wage Cut Faces 30,000

ST. LOUIS, April 8 (AP)—International Shoe Company announced today it expects on May 8 to reduce wages of its 30,000 employes approximately 10 per cent.

Frome Murder Case Break Seen in Texas Mine Clues

Bloodstained Paper, Auto Tracks Found At Desolate Spot

EL PASO, Tex., April 8—A "break" in the baffling desert torture slaying of Mrs. Weston G. Frome, 46, and her daughter, Nancy, 23, was reported near today as sheriff's officers combed the shafts of an abandoned mine near Van Horn.

Trailing a dwindling number of clues across the desolate Texas wastelands, officers discovered at the mouth of the mine two blood-stained paper handkerchiefs and car tracks similar to those found near the bodies of the two women.

District Attorney Roy D. Jackson said the paper cleansing tissue found were of the same type as those carried in a glove compartment of the motor car in which the mother and daughter were making a cross-country tour.

SEARCH BROADENS

The new find came as Sheriff Chris Fox appealed to police throughout the nation for cooperation in his attempts to solve the murder mystery.

Sheriff Fox asked that he be sent at once any clues pointing towards a solution of the case—including stories of vagrants picked up in different cities who might discuss the crime.

"Only in this manner," he said "can I gather enough information to lay hands on the killer or killers. I'd like to hear from those who might have seen the dark coupe which apparently figured in the case."

MORE SUSPECTS

Latest to be taken into custody were two men picked up at Shreveport, La. They were reported carrying about $1,000 in cash and postal savings books, a .32 caliber revolver and a .22 caliber rifle. Miss Frome was killed by a .22 bullet.

Stories told by individuals picked up and questioned regarding the crime have been so "muddled" Sheriff Fox said, that they will not be straightened out for a day or two.

Following a number of other clues officers sought the owner of a pair of bloodstained boots found abandoned in Banderson, Texas, and they examined a battered traveling bag that had been thrown from an east-bound train 300 miles southwest of here.

'Romeo' Slayer Trial Set For May 9

NEW YORK, April 8 (INS)—Wearing mourning clothes for the sweetheart he killed in an unfinished "Romeo and Juliet" suicide pact, Donald Carroll, Jr., 16, pleaded "not guilty" to the charge of murder and his trial was set for May 9.

He was hugged and kissed, after the arraignment, by Mrs. Fred Matthiesen, mother of Charlotte Matthiesen, 15, the slain girl.

Mrs. Matthiesen had previously fainted in court but was quickly revived.

"We all loved Charlotte," Mrs. Matthiesen told him. Her husband, sympathetic from the first toward the boy again assured him, "We'll stand by you at the trial."

The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Carroll, sat beside the Matthiesens in the courtroom during the arraignment.

The youthful slayer wore a black suit, a black tie and black shoes. He came into court handcuffed, but the manacles were removed before the brief routine of arraignment was started. He bore himself as if weighed down by great grief.

He said nothing in court and the formal plea of innocence was made for him by Sydney Rosenthal, his lawyer. Donald stood with his eyes cast down and his hands clasped in front of him.

17 Dogs Killed By Gas, Pup OK

Escapes 5-Minute Monoxide Test

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 8 (AP)—Five minutes in the pound's carbon monoxide execution chamber—

Seventeen dogs lay dead, but a nameless little fox terrier puppy walked out alive.

"I can't account for it," said Dr. R. L. Rhea, veterinarian, "unless the dog got next to a crack. Three minutes in that gas will kill any dog or human."

Pound attendants said the dog was "legally dead" and that no further attempt would be made to execute him.

Denial by Condon In $200,000 Suit

NEW YORK, April 8—Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon, through a spokesman, today denied allegations of John J. Noscovitsky, a private detective who has brought suit for $200,000 charging that Condon had repeatedly accused him publicly of being implicated in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

In his complaint, the detective said that Condon had stated that Noscovitsky was the main instigator in the kidnaping, the mysterious "J. J. Faulkner" who took some of the ransom money to a bank.

Charge Radical Students Rule Over College

(Special to Boston Evening American)

NEW YORK, April 8—How 1000 young radicals have seized every student activity in Brooklyn College in order to dominate the other 10,000 students, was revealed today by Dr. J. W. Park, director of the evening session.

They control the student counsel, the policies of the weekly newspapers and hold most of the important positions in the college, he said.

The situation has become such that the main body of students are indignant.

Most of the radicals are members of the Young Communist League and the American Students' Union, which has been sponsoring "peace stoppages" and "peace discussions" in preparation for the "peace strike" April 27.

The school papers are now seeking funds to send the Spanish Loyalists, and print resolutions urging the secretary of state to intervene for 15 Americans held by General Franco.

U. S. Navy Plans Seen Jap Threat

KOBE, Japan, April 8 (AP)—Admiral Mitsuisasa Yonai, minister of the navy, declared today the announced decision of the United State and Britain to abandon the 25,000-ton battleship limits of the 1936 London treaty "must be interpreted as evidence of their intention to oppose Japan."

He declared Japan was not building "bigger ships at present," but said the American and British programs might compel her to revamp her naval program.

Yonai, in a newspaper interview, assailed the American and British naval programs as indicating "a superiority complex."

"Both England and the United States are building bigger ships with larger guns," he declared.

"Japan is neither building nor intending to build bigger ships at present. However, it is natural that Japan should take the necessary measures to meet the situation."

Signs of Warning Ordered for Buses

In a drive to protect passengers leaving buses, traffic warning signs will be placed over the exits of nearly 1200 of the vehicles, the state department of public works announced today.

The drive was inaugurated as the result of the recent death of a passenger struck by a car as he left a bus on the Worcester turnpike in Brookline.

Dartmouth Clue To Levine Boy

DARTMOUTH, April 8 (AP)—Police today sought for questioning occupants of a New York registered automobile which, a Dartmouth gasoline station attendant reported, carried a passenger resembling Peter David Levine, kidnaped 12-year-old New York boy.

Massachusetts state police at the Fairhaven barracks were informed that the car carried two men on the front seat and a woman and the boy in back. The attendant said the occupants indicated they were traveling toward New York.

Police of northeastern states were requested to watch for the automobile.

Child Has Rare Blood Disease

NEW HAVEN, Ct., April 8 (INS)—Unconcerned, she played with dolls today and other gifts presented on her eighth birthday as specialists wondered another "rare medical case."

Isabelle Manzari has had 140 one pint blood transfusions in the last seven years, 90 from her father, 46 from her mother and four from public donors.

Afflicted with an ailment known as "Cooley anaemia," the child appears healthy but must make regular trips to the New Haven hospital for the transfusions.

The disease, usually found in infants and conquered in a short time, is curable doctors believe, but this case has them perplexed.

Ipswich Clams Feature Marietta Pioneers' Fete

MARIETTA, O., April 8 (INS)—Three hundred and fifty bushels of clams, shipped here from Ipswich, Mass., following the arrival of "Pioneer" caravan emulating the 1788 trek of the first settlers of the northwest territory, will be baked and served during the New England-Northwest territory celebration today.

The "pioneers" landed here yesterday after sailing down the Ohio river from West Newton, Pa. They were commemorating the 150th anniversary of the founding of Marietta, the first incorporated town in the Northwest territory.

A slight drizzle and a heavy fog—much the same weather that greeted Rufus Putnam and the original pioneers 150 years ago—was in evidence when the flotilla docked.

The 37 college men, members of the party, jumped from their boats to be greeted by an estimated 30,000 people, the largest crowd in the city's history. But newsreel cameramen made them do it all over again, to be sure the event was recorded on their films.

A parade, described over a national radio hookup, featured the afternoon celebration. Band concerts, speeches and banquets took up the remainder of the time.

The carnival air will continue through Sunday, when the "pioneers" leave on a tour of five states of the northwest territory.

Roosevelt Plans More Spending

U. S. Mayors Demand 3 Billions to Supply Jobs for Needy higher actual income than at any time in two decades. The receipts passed the $2,000,000,000 mark, nearly a billion more than had been received at this time last year from all sources.

Business leaders still observed caution in discussing the situation, however. International News Service sent a questionnaire to 20 leading business men, asking their opinions of the causes of the recession, a possible cure and the policies of the administration, but all begged off.

In an extraordinary legislative step, the House today re-passed and sent to the White House the Glass bill while will free $1,500,000,000 in Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds for loans to business—big and little.

WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, who would be in charge of the vast spending program if the reorganization bill passes and he becomes Secretary ow Welfare, told the Senate unemploymenta nd relief committee of growing need of funds to fight destitution.

Three Billion for Jobs Urged by U. S. Mayors

WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—The United States conference of mayors asked President Roosevelt today to recommend that Congress appropriate $3,000,000,000 to give work to 3,500,000 needy unemployed.

The mayors conferred with the President shortly after he had told a press conference that his billion dollar estimate for work relief in the next fiscal year would have to be increased. President Roosevelt mentioned no specific figure, however.

The President, discussing with reporters prospective action to help stimulate employment, also said new public works expenditures were under consideration but that no decision on it had been reached. Informed persons have said a $1,500,000,000 loan program was in mind.

GETS RFC LOAN

The public works program, Roosevelt explained, would be exclusive of the work relief program and efforts to aid business through broadened lending powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Legislation empowering the RFC to lend as much as $1,500,000,000 to business as well as to municipalities for construction projects was sent to the President today for his signature.

He received the measure after the House had completed final Congressional action.

The mayors' committee said in a statement issued after the talk with Mr. Roosevelt that the present recession had resulted in "widespread unemployment" and had forced relief needs in many cities to rise to "staggering levels."

"While there is some evidence of a slackening in the precipitous rate of decline in industrial and business activity which occurred in recent months," the mayors added, "there is no question that the full effects of the decline, in terms of the destitution which follows unemployment have not yet been felt.

TOBIN AT PARLEY

"Various estimates of the employment indicate that between 3,500,000 and 4,000,000 workers lost their jobs during the period from September to February, and while the decline in industrial production since February has apparently been relatively small, thousands of workers are still being separated from industrial payrolls."

The group, headed by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York city, conference president, included Mayors Harold H. Burton, Cleveland; Daniel W. Hoan, Milwaukee; Bernard F. Dickmann, St. Louis; Maurice J. Tobin, Boston; Ross D. Rogers, Amarillo, Tex.; Joseph D. Scholtz, Louisville, and R. E. L. Chancey, Tampa.

At his press conference the President said one feature of the works program being discussed was long term loans without interest, to municipalities.

He said he had not decided whether to combine public works and work relief proposals in one message to Congress or to make them separate.

PLANS MANY PROJECTS

The President said the public works program under consideration included both federal and non-federal projects.

Whatever program was decided upon, he said in response to questions, the work relief appropriations and the pending bill broadening the powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lend to industries and busines would be exclusive of it.

In other words, he said the money proposed for public works would not reduce the appropriation for work relief and the funds made available to business by the RFC.

Asked about a proposal that the federal government guarantee railroad bonds to help those in need of speedy reorganization, the President replied with a question: Why guarantee railroad bonds?

Deal Plans 7 Months Relief, Says Hopkins

WASHINGTON, April 8 (INS)—President Roosevelt will submit to Congress next week recommendations for Works Progress Administration expenditures to cover relief needs only until the next session of Congress convenes in January, Administrator WPA Harry L. Hopkins disclosed today.

The future relief situation is shrouded in so much doubt that the administration believes dependable estimates can be made only for seven months ahead, Hopkins told the special Senate committee investigating unemployment and relief conditions.

Estimates to be submitted to Congress by the President will also include funds needed for the Civilian Conservation Corps and the Farm Security Administration, Hopkins said.

In reply to questions by Senator Byrnes (D.) of South Carolina, chairman, Hopkins intimated the final figure to be asked of Congress for WPA had not yet been definitely fixed.

2,500,000 ON WPA

"There has been no meeting of minds yet on the amount of money we will need," he said. "I don't think we will submit estimates beyond the next seven months on the theory that no one can estimate beyond that period. I know I have tried it in the last few years and I found it cannot be done with accuracy."

The WPA is furnishing jobs for people on relief rolls in an ever-increasing number, he said, explaining:

"We are fast approaching the time when we cannot take on any more."

The WPA spent $155,000,000 last month in giving relief to the needy, he revealed. Within the last few days WPA has established a standing offer in Detroit, St. Louis and other cities to furnish work for every employable person listed on the relief roll, he said.

"As against a peak of 27,000,000 persons in the winter of 1933-34," Hopkins said, "there are at the present time about 18,000,000 men, women and children receiving public assistance.

"This represents over 6,000,000 households. Over the last five years this figure has varied from 14,000,000 to 27,000,000 people receiving assistance from public funds each month."

There is no "single cause" of the present business slump, Hopkins contended.

"Something has happened," he said, suggesting that the causes are:

"Purchasing power in the hands of the consumers failed to keep pace with production.

"Tremendous increase in inventories.

"The failure of the promising building revival because of rising costs and unwarranted increases in prices."

Large segments of the population are living in poverty, Hopkins said.

"They have inadequate clothing, live in miserable houses and are without adequate medical care and they have no purchasing power to keep the economic machine going," he declared.

TELLS OF POVERTY

Millions of Americans are living in homes that are "unfit from every point of view for human habitation," he said. Poverty in the rural areas he characterized as "widespread." Almost every industry has been hit by the slump.

"To sum up," he said, "the Federal Relief program now in operation while needing integration and expansion in some respects, does represent a substantial beginning of a dignified and adequate security program.

"The government's work program in the future should be integrated with the unemployment insurance systems and the employment service. By that I mean that these major programs to aid the unemployed must constitute as complementary parts of a comprehensive unemployment relief plan."

U. S. Rail Control Asked in Senate

WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—Senator Lundeen (Fl.) of Minnesota, proposed today that the government take over the railroads.

A bill introduced by Lundeen would set up a "United States railway service" to take over "operation, control and ownership" of roads which had $1,000,000 or more gross income in 1935.

Mrs. Pauline Revere Auerhamer, left, chats with Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., during the visit of the "Paul Revere" delegation in Washington. Mrs. Auerhamer, direct descendant of the famous patriot, found Senator Lodge an ardent partisan in her cause. She was one of the leaders of the Bay State group which vigorously protested passage of the President's "dictator" bill. While the Massachusetts members were "getting their licks," other "Paul Revere" delegations from over the nation were impressing the importance of the bill's defeat on their representatives.

An effusive welcome was accorded Massachusetts' "Paul Revere" delegation when it was met in Washington by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. Senator Lodge was in hearty sympathy with the delegation's purpose of balking passage of President Roosevelt's "dictator" reorganization bill. Not so successful was the group in its visits to Congressmen McCormack and Healey, who held firm in favor of the measure. Lodge is sixth from left. At his right is Mrs. Pauline Revere Auerhamer of Brookline, descendant of the original Paul Revere. The patriotic delegation arrived in Boston today, confident their efforts will help defeat the measure.

Though he stood firm in his determination to support the reorganization bill, Congressman John W. McCormack of Boston was pleasant enough to these members of the Bay State "Paul Revere" delegation opposing passage of the measure. Third from left is Miss Jeannette Chisholm, former assistant district attorney of Middlesex County.

International News Photograph Service

Heartened by the "victory spirit," these "Paul Revere" riders from the Bay State arrive at Washington depot to launch their protests against President Roosevelt's "dictator" measure. A scant hour later they were entering the office of Rep. McCormack to lodge their complaints against the bill and urge McCormack to change his position and vote against it. McCormack refused politely, as did Rep. Healey a short time later. Nevertheless, the delegation was in high spirits on their return to Boston today. Members felt their journey to the Capital had not been in vain. After their official work was over, the delegation split up and viewed historic points in the city, despite a heavy rain.

Mrs. Lillian Rockwell, of Roxbury, left, and Mrs. Pauline Revere Auerhamer of Brookline, descendant of Paul Revere, wait patiently outside the office of Congressman McCormack to say their piece against the reorganization bill. Mrs. Auerhamer spoke vigorously, imploring McCormack to change his mind but he maintained his support of the measure.

Bay State Reveres Jubilant Over Their Washington Trip

Patriots Sure They Helped to Defeat Dictator Bill

Massachusetts' "Paul Revere riders" returned to Boston from Washington today after launching a vigorous protest against passage of President Roosevelt's executive reorganization measure.

Though they failed to gain pledges of opposition from two of the Massachusetts congressional delegation, the returning "Paul Reveres" were in a jubilant mood.

In the capital they advanced their cause many with thousands of other Paul Reveres assembled from all over the nation in a united move to help defeat the dictatorial proposal.

Arriving in Washington on a special train, the delegation at once opened its campaign with a visit to Congressman John W. McCormack one of the measure's opponents.

Six hours later he was picked up by his father who explained that in the confusion of the arrival of the new member of the family he had almost forgotten Junior.

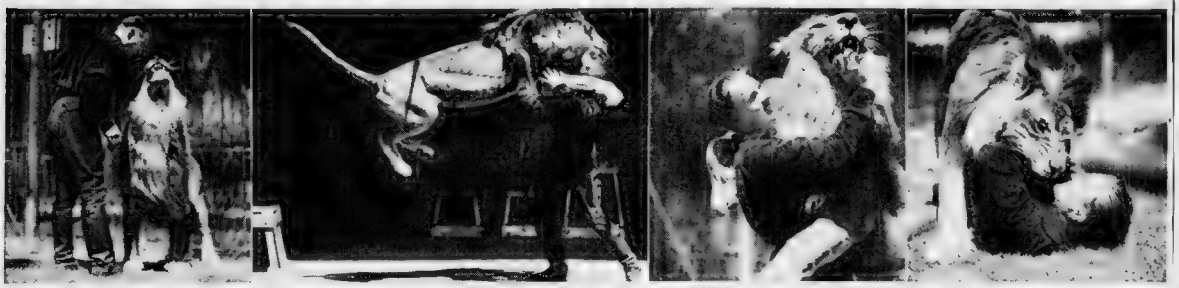
MEL KOONTZ—FAMOUS HOLLYWOOD WILD ANIMAL TAMER—WRESTLES WITH A FULL-GROWN LION!



HERE'S MEL KOONTZ alone in the cage with four hundred and fifty pounds of lion. The huge lion crouches—then springs straight at Koontz. Nerves cool as ice, Mel meets the charge head on. Man and lion clinch while onlookers feel their nerves grow tense. Even with the lion's jaw only inches from his throat, Mel shows himself complete master of the savage beast. No doubt about his nerves being healthy!

And, as Mel points out, one of the differences he finds between Camels and other cigarettes has to do with having healthy nerves. Mel says: "No matter how many I smoke, Camels don't frazzle my nerves."

"I'll say it makes a difference to me what cigarette I smoke"

SAYS MEL KOONTZ TO PENN PHILLIPS

"I guess you hate to be particular about your cigarette, Mel. I've often wondered if Camels are different from other kinds?"
"Take it from me, Penn, any one-cigarette's-as-good-as-another talk is the bunk. There are a lot of angles to consider in smoking. Camel is the cigarette I know really agrees with me on all counts. That packs a lot of meaning because I smoke a lot of Camels. They're different all right. My hat's off to 'em for real, natural mildness—the kind that doesn't get my nerves ragged—or make my throat raspy—or get flat-tasting. I'd walk a mile for a Camel!'"

MEL KOONTZ trains tigers as well as lions. It was just after he'd been schooling one of the "big cats" for a new movie that Penn Phillips got to talking cigarettes with him. If you are not a Camel smoker, perhaps like Mr. Phillips you, too, have wondered if there is a distinct difference between Camels and other cigarettes. Mel Koontz gives his personal slant on that question, above. And millions of other men and women find what they want in Camels. One smoker tells another: "Camels agree with me!" Yes, those costlier tobaccos in Camels do make a difference!

ONE SMOKER TELLS ANOTHER . . . "Camels agree with me"

"WE CHOOSE CAMELS FOR OUR OWN SMOKING. WE KNOW TOBACCO"

—SAY THESE TOBACCO PLANTERS

"I know the kind of tobacco used for making various cigarettes," says Mr. Beckham Wright, who has spent 13 years growing tobacco. "I know it from the ground up. Camel got my choice grades last year—and many years back," he adds, "I'm talking about what I know when I say Camels are made from MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS."

Mr. George Crumbaugh, another well-known planter, had a fine tobacco crop last year. "My best yet," he says. "And the Camel people bought all the choice lots—paid me more than I ever got before too. Naturally, Camel's the cigarette I smoke myself. Fact is, most planters favor Camels. So I know that Camels use finer tobaccos."

"I've grown over fifteen crops of tobacco the past five years," says the successor partner, Mr. Joel White, of Danville, Kentucky. "The best of my last crop went to the Camel people at the best prices, as it so often does. Most of the other planters around here sold their best grades to Camel too. I stick to Camels and I know I'm smoking choice tobaccos."

"My brothers and I have been planting tobacco for 21 years," Mr. John Wallace, Jr. says. "I sold Camel every pound of my last crop that was top grade—bought up most of the finer tobacco in this section too. I've been smoking Camels for 17-18 years now. And most other planters are like me—we're Camel smokers because we know what it means to smoke finer tobacco."

"It's a fact that Camel uses costlier tobaccos," adds Floyd Smither, who grows tobacco and knows it from the ground up. "Last year I grew a [illegible] of tobacco and Camel [illegible] up all the choice lots, paid more for it. I smoke Camels myself, believe me. So do most planters hereabouts. I know the quality tobacco that goes [illegible]

Asks More Ship Calls to Boost Boston Port

Supervisor Seeks U. S. Maritime Board's O.K. On New Service

Attention of additional American flag liners to Boston, particularly in the Pacific service was advocated today before the United States Maritime Commission as a means of developing Boston's port.

The plea was made by George P. Lord, municipal supervisor for the Boston Port Authority, and with former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald also present as a representative of the Port Authority.

"We would suggest the allocating of several additional vessels of the American-Scantic line," said Lord, "in order that this service might be speeded up to permit calls at Boston east bound.

"This would provide an outward service at Boston. The only regular outward service available from Boston is in foreign vessels and those proceed down the coast to gulf ports for final loading.

"Therefore, cargoes from New England ports, for destination at Baltic ports, must move to New York in order to connect with steamer service to those Baltic ports.

"At present all service from Africa is inward only. We have no outward service from Boston. All New England cargo must move to New York in order to connect with ays steamship service to African ports.

"We would suggest an improvement in this service to bring more frequent arrivals, and also at least one vessel to load outward on a monthly schedule. By so doing, export cargo may be solicited for Boston from the New England area."

$500 Bill Is Found In Laundry Machine

JERSEY CITY, April 8 (INS)—Frank Lem, Chinese sent his shirts to an Atlantic City laundry forgetting to remove $500 from the pocket, and a $500 bill from the pocket of Irving Langdon, laundry foreman, found the $500 in the washing machine and cash Lem, who claimed the money.

Where's the $500? Lem asked. They took the machine apart. The $500 was in a sock, a bit bleached but otherwise undamaged.

Downtown Fire Routs Widow, Pet

Insurance Area's Sole Resident Flees $7500 Blaze

Lone resident of Boston's downtown insurance district, a 45-year-old widow early today was forced to flee when fire broke out in the Central street building in which she lives.

She is Mrs. H. P. Wecker, who occupies a tiny apartment above a cafe in which the blaze began. The three-story building in which she lives is dwarfed by tall office buildings about it. A dachshund is her sole companion.

The office structures surrounding were dark and empty, and only the beat patrolman in the district was about when the fire believed to have been started by a carelessly discarded cigarette broke out.

Heat, which blistered the floors of her apartment, awakened the dachshund whose clamor aroused the mistress. Together they fled to the street.

The flames did not penetrate into Mrs. Wecker's quarters. Company quelling the cafe, they caused damage of $7500.

Mrs. Wecker's husband, a painter, used the apartment as a combination bachelor pad and home. When he died three years ago she said she cannot give his business and continued to occupy the studio.

Hunt Worcester Girl's Abductor

WORCESTER, April 8—A wide search throughout the state was instituted today for the abductor of pretty Barbara Hill, 16, of Sterling Junction, who was driven to a lonely section of Holden yesterday and was injured when she was forced to jump from his speeding car to escape.

Although the girl could not give police the registration of the stranger's car, she gave a complete description of him, and police are certain he will soon be apprehended.

After being driven to the isolated section Miss Hill, a State Teachers College student, fought her way to the running board of the car and jumped off into a ditch.

She was standing on Chandler street last night when the man drove up, the girl said. He invited to drive her home and she accepted after much hesitation. Instead of driving toward Sterling he headed toward Holden.

She pleaded with the man to stop and finally managed to open the door and climb out to the running board. She clung to the side of the car, screaming, and finally jumped into the ditch.

Buck Snow to Save 7 in School Bus

PAMPA, Tex., April 8 (INS)—A cavalcade of trucks and ambulances manned by 60 men bucked 15-foot snowdrifts today in a desperate effort to save the lives of seven children marooned overnight in a school bus.

The bus was lost in the snow-banked prairie somers here south of here, Sheriff O. T. Lindsey reported. Thirty other youngsters being returned from the Gray County school were dropped off along the route and reached their homes safely.

Will, Filed 24 Years Ago, Now Comes Up

$50,000 Trust Fund Established by Lynn Leather Man

A will that was filed almost 24 years ago by a wealthy Lynn leather manufacturer will be finally executed within a few days it was learned today by the Boston Evening American.

Charles Barker Oliver, wealthy native of Lynn, whose home was on Washington street, died in 1914, leaving an estate estimated to approximate $500,000.

In his will he provided that a trust fund of $50,000 be established half of which was to go to the East Saugus Methodist Episcopal Church and half to the Lynn Hospital when all members of his family had died.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Maude Oliver Hardy Chipman, Mr. Oliver's daughter and the last member of the family, died in Pomona, California. Her ashes are being sent to Mt. Auburn Chapel in Cambridge, where funeral services will be held, and then they will be buried by the side of her second husband, the late Curtis Chipman, at Newburyport.

Several years ago Mr. Oliver's wife, Mary, died, and more than a year ago his only son, Stacey, died.

Now the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company, executors of the will announce the provisions of the dead man's wishes will be carried out.

The Brighter Side

Reg. U. S. Patent Office
By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright 1938 by King Features Syndicate Inc. In Great Britain copyright and all other rights reserved.

Our annual list of the 12 best dressed men in the United States is now ready for the press.

We have found it necessary to make a few revisions from last year. Some of our 1937 boys have gone back as new names have pushed forward, though it is with no little satisfaction that we note that our old key man Mike Joseph E. Widener and Mr Wm. Gamm Packer House Ryan are heading their own.

Mr. Widener, who is the noted racing magnate remains our No 1 best dressed man. Indeed Mr. Widener is getting even better and better dressed from year to year.

The last time we saw him was at a race track down in Florida. He was wearing a suit of dark with black and white shirt stripes which once was deemed sinful variance with natural law and order but which in Mr. Widener's case became an eye tidy new look.

To show you Mr. Widener's influence on the world of male fashions, all the hot men in the Florida winter colony began showing up in dark suits with black and white sport shoes though most of them were afterwards wondering what to keep the white from rubbing off on the dark trousers cuffs.

We then come to our 11th tailor, and we stand ready to back our opinion in competition with marbles or chalk, professional or amateur.

Joseph F. Widener, William Ryan, Herbert Bayard Swope, Rodney Emerson Boone, Paul Ames, Jules Glaenzer, Larz Dewis, Maurice Paul, Richard L. Berlin, Baron Jack Schroeder, Roy Howard, Dave Smart.

We have proposed a standing committee of experts as follows: Mr. Adolphe Menjou, Mr. Leo Carrillo and Mr. Alexander Woollcott, because we deem Mr. Menjou a professional, well dressed man. He admits that clothes are part of his stock in trade.

Our boys are amateurs or at least no more than semi-pros. It might appear that we tried a bit hard in the publication grades in particular the Misses Boone, Paul, Berlin, Howard and Smart, all of whom are identified with newspapers or magazines but as I point out, their business is such that they can afford to dress better than average.

We might say that we put Mr. Dave Smart after some hesitation. That Mr. Smart deserves a place on our list there can be no doubt, but there is the possibility that he may be challenged by some on the ground of professionalism.

Mr. Smart is the editor of Esquire. Jealous rivals may contend that he is ineligible to our list because his dressing does not require the deep consideration of the element of dressing that deceives others. They may argue that Mr. Smart has to do is look at the men's fashions in his magazine.

If the reply is that the same advantage is open to everyone else at least has a smash, the rivals might say yes but Mr Smart can sneak first peek on them through the advance proof sheets. However we must let Mr. Smart's case stand as qualifying as one of the best dressed consumers.

We are pretty sure that he good Baron Jack will not be adequate with here. We have seen many consumers in our time but never a better dressed consumer than Baron Jack as presented in the snapshots of himself that he sends from his winter vacations in Palm Springs. He is absolutely the final word in chaps boots spurs hat accessories, neckerchief and all the other cowboy gear.

It is true that Baron Jack has not as yet plowed any cows but that is nothing to do with the best dressed consumer case. As a matter of fact, Baron Jack never was one cow in his life and never was known to be encountered in West cheering one day. Baron Jack is a city slicker to the core, but he is a good sport and we are glad that Baron Jack is here in Palm Springs.

Suit on 'Witch' Is Threatened

Boston Man Seeking N. H. Exoneration

HAMPTON, N. H., April 8 (AP) — The town of Hampton has received a written threat of "legal action" and it all started because of the publicity given to the exoneration of Eunice "Goody" Cole of witchcraft in connection with the tercentenary celebration to be held this summer.

However, the selectmen say, they are not worried over the threat, which came from Greater Boston. The writer claims to be a descendant of the "Towle Witch" and after hearing of Goody Cole's exoneration felt that his ancestor, once persecuted on charges similar to the Cole witch, should also be exonerated.

The letter was laid aside for later action by the selectmen.

Interior Decorating Lecture Delights at Junior League

By BETTY ALDEN

WHEN A MAN can't sew a button on his vest or scramble his own eggs, he tells you it doesn't really matter . . . he could do it if he put his mind to it . . . "For," says he, "the best tailors and cooks in the world are men! And, for that matter, a woman's clothes, hats, and even the way she does her hair, were probably originated by men!" . . .

JANE WOODHOUSE
James M. Blauvelt on the subject of Drama in Interior Decorating . . .

We must admit there is some truth in what members of the handsomer sex have to say . . . When we go shopping for hats and dresses to wear in the Easter Parade, John Frederick, Adrian and Patou are well represented in the shops . . . Masculine chefs are masters of the kitchens of every hotel and famous eating place we ever heard of . . . and men have even invaded the last stronghold of femininity—the home . . .

Masculine interior decorators tell Milady how to decorate her rooms . . . the best colors to accent her personality . . . and even tell her what sort of gowns to wear to harmonize with her background . . . And, rather than resent it, Milady seems to like it . . . as evidenced by the large gathering of fashionable women which filled the Junior League ballroom yesterday morning to hear

Listening intently every word was Mrs. Clarence V. Burrage, who has made a thorough study of the subject, herself . . . She was accompanied by her newly-married daughter, Mrs. Robert Booth, and the latter's sister-in-law, Miss Emily Booth . . .

Betsey Luscombe seemed to be the only prospective bride in the gathering . . . which is probably just as well for Mr. Blauvelt's suggestions for decorating were pretty ambitious for young brides . . . who would seldom start housekeeping in an apartment as sumptuous as that of Lily Pons or Miriam Hopkins, which he described . . .

Mrs. Vincent Lamb and Mrs. Arsene de Rosset Lloyd listened with intense interest to suggestions about blending colors in a room . . . Pauline, in a deftly blended outfit of black, gray and mustard which took the prize for chic among the morning's costumes . . . She is just back from a six-week motor trip to Arizona, where she visited her grandmother, Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird . . .

Mrs. Franklin Hobbs, who is a patroness for this series of lectures, given under the auspices of the Boston chapter of the American Institute of Decorating, was one of the intent listeners . . . the next lecture, on April 21, will be given by Madame Charles Huard, who will describe her famous chateau in France . . .

Mrs. John Homans . . . a colorful figure in purplish tweeds with feather ornaments of cherry, purple and green on her matching hat . . . knitted during most of the lecture . . .

Junior David Riesmans Visited by Stork

IT'S A BOY at the Junior David Riesmans in Philadelphia, and the family is even more than ordinarily jubilant at the arrival of the son and heir . . .

Professor and Mrs. Maurice deKay Thompson of Beacon street, parents of Mrs. Riesman (Evelyn Thompson) are joining in the celebration . . . for the week-old infant is the first boy to arrive in the family after three generations of girls . . .

The baby's aunt, Mrs. Grenville Goodwin (Janice Thompson), and Mr. Goodwin, have arrived in Boston from Santa Fe, New Mexico, to spend a couple of weeks with Professor and Mrs. Thompson . . .

This is Janice's first visit home since her marriage in the autumn of 1936, so she has a full social schedule for the next week or so . . . She and her two sisters, Mrs. Riesman and Claire, who made her debut two years ago, are all Winsor School graduates, and each has pursued a definite study . . . Before her marriage, Janice was a pupil of Charles Woodberry, one of Boston's famous masters of painting . . . Evelyn prepared at Bryn Mawr for a career in journalism . . . and Claire, the youngest, is a student at Connecticut College for Women . . .

Harvard Hockey Stars in Bermuda

IT'S CERTAINLY a far cry from the chilly atmosphere and strenuous exertion of the hockey rink to lolling on the warm sands at Bermuda . . . and that's probably just why Ralph Pope and Austin Harding, stars of the Harvard hockey team, chose Bermuda for their spring vacation . . . at the close of the hockey season . . . They are there now, staying at the Princess, and will be back in about a week . . .

• • •

Debs of a few seasons ago will be interested to learn that Jane Woodhouse, who made her debut at a Valentine party during the 1932-33 season . . . and later forsook Boston social activities to study theatrical work and dramatics in London . . . is once again in our midst, and will give a lecture at the Leland Powers School of the Theater tomorrow morning . . .

Jane will describe her recent experiences designing costumes for London operatic productions, and managing the television productions at Alexandra Palace in London.

Novel suggestions for brightening Easter dishes won praise of 400 persons crowding the vestry of Robinson Memorial Church in Malden for the cooking school held by the Ladies Aid Society of the church in co-operation with Martha Lee, home economist of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser.

Brightly hued Easter eggs rimmed the substantial platter containing the dinner of smoked shoulder, oven cooked beets, peanut butter, stuffed potatoes, and asparagus and cottage cheese timbales which Miss Lee prepared.

The food expert likewise deftly shaped slices of turnip around small carrots and pinned them with toothpicks to form shapes of calla lilies as dish decorations.

MAKES TIMBALES

In making the tasty timbales Miss Lee added one and a half cups of cottage cheese and a teaspoon of grated onion to a mixture of two tablespoons of melted butter and one and a half cups of bread crumbs.

Next two cups of diced and drained cooked asparagus, beaten yolks of two eggs and salt and pepper were stirred in. Stiffly beaten egg whites were folded into the mixture poured into six buttered custard cups and baked in a pan of water in a moderate oven for 30 minutes.

Baked shoulder, Dutch style beans, all-bran corn bread, bowl of lettuce, gingerbread baked shortcake, tea and coffee formed Miss Lee's Saturday night supper menu.

The shortcake, greeted with applause from the audience of home expert displayed it, was made as follows

SHORTCAKE IS MADE

Cream one half cup shortening and an equal amount of sugar, beat in one egg, add a cup of molasses, then add alternately with a cup of boiling water a mixture of two and a half cups flour, half a teaspoon baking soda, cloves, nutmeg, ginger, cinnamon and salt. Bake in layer pans in moderate oven 40 minutes. Filling between layers and over top consisted of whipped cream and four sliced bananas.

For a grilled dinner suggested Miss Lee offered bran muffins, bananas grilled, tomatoes, potato cabbage salad, coffee delight and coffee.

Goodwin Urges Week-End Cut In Accidents

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Fred A. Goodwin today urged all chiefs of police in Massachusetts to institute a week-end drive against drunken drivers and speeders to cut down accidents.

In a letter sent to every chief of police, Registrar Goodwin says:

"Fifty thousand new drivers, with that many newly registered cars, burst out on to the highways last week-end with all the enthusiasm of a boy with a new toy. There was a noticeable increase in speed on all the main highways. The result was that on Monday morning eight persons were reported killed, and hundreds injured.

"Through the active work of the police and this department, the old drivers had learned their lessons, and the deaths so far this year have been far less than for any year for a long time. It is necessary, if we are to keep up this good record, to increase immediately our activity against those who persist in speeding and those who drive their cars after drinking liquor.

"I hope you will make a special drive over the week-end against all persons driving in an improper manner, and if you do not prosecute them, send their names to me, so that I may either warn them or take them off the road.

"Most of the trouble is at nighttime, and if you can increase your activity at night, it will certainly help the whole situation."

Major Crimes Show Increase

Except for murder and automobile thefts all major crimes in this city showed an increase in 1937 over 1936 Police Commissioner Timothy Sullivan's annual report to Governor Hurley revealed today.

Out of 89,948 arrests made last year, 51,670 were for serious offenses. This was an increase of 2065 over the previous year.

The police radio system was credited for the increased number of arrests.

Manslaughter, criminal attacks, robberies, burglaries, violations of state liquor laws and drunken driving all showed a gain.

An increase of $181,494 in expenses of the Department was chiefly due to the addition of 192 patrolmen to the force. Four new harbor patrol boats were added to the department's equipment.

GIRL About TOWN

By ANN MARSTERS

REFLECTIONS ON NEWSPAPERING: Veteran newspaper people do not, as a rule, read their own stories after they appear in the paper—not even when their names head the stories.

The personal thrill of a by-line fades quickly. Yet there is no emotion like the thrill of seeing one's by-line for the first time. I remember my own sharp elation when I first saw my name in newspaper print, and I can remember the story itself—almost word for word. (It had taken me at least five hours to write it.) I carried it around in my bag for days and days and re-read it a thousand times.

Ann Marsters

Probably no reporter ever forgets his first assignment for a big newspaper, or the feelings that went with it. Mine was to get an interview with Barbara Stanwyck at the Keith Memorial Theater—and I was terrified into speechlessness, and could think of only one question to ask her—which she wouldn't answer.

But, fortunately, such fears fade quickly, too—as does the thrill of "meeting celebrities."

We Know the Questions, Rarely the Answers

There are occasions when news [illegible] themselves are inter[illegible] [illegible] would think that after [illegible] set to know all the [illegible] and what makes a good [illegible] would be able to give good [illegible] to the interviewer. But [illegible] seldom so. We feel, I think, a bit foolish and self-conscious at most the mere idea of being interviewed because we're so used to asking all the questions instead of answering them.

There are very few people who are ready to interview, and can always give the reporter a good story. The first on my list is James Michael Curley. Material for stories simply flows from his lips—even though he may be thinking of a dozen different things at the same time. The next-best story giver is Cecil B. DeMille.

He said when first he saw me
Life seemed at once divine
Each night he dreamed of angels
And every face was mine

Sometimes a voice in sleeping
Would all his hopes forbid
And then he'd waken, weeping . . .
Do you really think he did?

An organ is a whole lot more than it appears to be, as you may discover when you learn something about its insides.

Lincoln Spiess Assistant Organist at the Old South church recently gave a lecture on the mechanisms of the organ—which are much too complicated, alas, for us to explain here (or anywhere else).

He did say however, that most people are under the impression that all the sounds from the organ come from the visible pipes. But those are merely for looks—and in back of them, on an average-sized church organ, are some 20,000 various sized pipes. In a really large organ there are, of course a lot more.

Mr. Spiess demonstrated that there is hardly a musical instrument which the organ can't imitate. And we have just begun to realize what a truly glorious instrument the organ can be.

It Takes Time, Cash To Be Beautiful

No longer need you ponder on whether or not a particular color will suit your complexion. You may make your complexion suit the color.

This was demonstrated at a love-ly bridal fashion show at Filene's under the direction of Elizabeth Arden. The gowns were by Filene with the proper makeup for each gown and for each color by Elizabeth Arden.

It seems that "any woman can wear any color"—if she knows her makeup. And any woman can be beautiful, too—if she has enough time and money to get that "Elizabeth Arden Look."

THIS Is LIFE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Much as we are used to it nowadays, the recent news, that marriage among the Nazis is to be a purely pagan rite without the least tincture of Christianity, came as a shock.

Robert E. Rogers

Theoretically Germany is Christian, even though East Prussia was made a part of the universal church as late as the 11th century. The history of Catholic Germany is old and splendid; the history of Protestant Germany dates from the 16th century and is equally splendid.

From the beginning marriage has been one of the most sacred of the Christian sacraments, taking precedence over the secular ceremony in token that in the eyes of the church, nothing can take the place of God's blessing on the lives of two people who have chosen each other till death do them part.

Today German marriage is essentially a civil ceremony with a pseudo-religious ritual, in which there is no mention of God or Christ, with the swastika taking the place of the cross and with all the emphasis on pure German blood and the divinely appointed Fuehrer as arbiter.

The emphasis on marriage is to make strong sons to fight for the Reich. Brunettes are given for large families. Girls do not matter particularly. They are to be farmed out for agriculture and domestic labor in a preparation for wedlock.

Only a few months ago we learned that the ancient rite of baptism, of dedicating the child to a spiritual life, has been replaced in the Nazi consciousness by a new dedication to a semi-pagan cult, the "German Faith," the religion of National Socialism.

The cult emphasizes the German tenets of race, blood, and soil. It thinks of Hitler as "God's revelation to the German people."

At baptism the child is received not so much into the Christian communion as into "the chain of her ancestors," with the admonition, "guard your blood so that the generations of kin a thousand years after you will be thankful for God is only in pure blood."

Church and State Locked in Argument

At baptism a child is not regenerated from original sin—the old dogma of faiths—because the Nazis maintain that the Germans are in origin noble and not sinful.

The child is not welcomed into Christian fellowship but into the German volksgemeinschaft, (the community of the people). "You are today and you are tomorrow. You are a thousand years before yourself. You are a thousand years after yourself; since blood was projected a thousand years before you came to be what you are."

Then they light candles to illuminate the family tree.

These two ceremonies, the marriage and the baptismal, are the secret of the death struggle which is taking place between the two churches, the Catholic and Protestant, and the state. The state is apparently determined to create a new religion of blood for the people, in which every child shall be baptized and every couple married, and every aged man and woman shall die.

It is the fanatical religion of pu German blood, of unblemished race, devotion to the Fuehrer, without consideration of Christ or faith. After over a 1000 years Germany is recusant, is apostate, at the bidding of a fanatic who is determined to wipe out not only Judaism but its child, Christianity, and to set up again the religion of Thor.

The best modern authority in anthropology tells us that there is no longer any such thing as pure racial blood. For a thousand years Jew and Christian have mingled their blood in marriage and the myth of the Aryan German, the pure blonde of Nietzsche's fancy, is only a myth—a tragic myth, as it seems likely, for the future of Germany.

Of spiritual idealism which both marriage and baptism are supposed to connote there is no trace. All is fleshly and material. Based on a pathetically false premise this Fuehrer attempts to devote his misguided people to a false ideal, based on a scientific error and an illiberal view of life and society, one which cannot but leave Germany isolated, despised—and pitied.

Woburn Stirred By 'Plebiscite' On Sunday

Residents Ponder Next Surprise Move by Mayor Kane

Mayor William E. Kane's April 24, Sunday, "plebiscite," described by the chief executive as the "first in the nation," had residents of this town in a daze today trying to figure out what new surprise the mayor would spring next.

Mayor Kane, determined to stage a showdown in his war with the city council, which failed to pass his pay cut measure last night, declared he would go ahead with his "plebiscite" to show that he holds public confidence.

WILL ANSWER QUESTIONS

Woburn citizens will go to the regular polls to answer a series of "yes" and "no" questions on various economy drive features of the municipal "brain" game and the use of the lion's cage for drunks.

Election officials will be asked to serve free of charge but Mayor Kane will pay for the cost of the ballots out of his own pocket.

Meanwhile, the mayor's foes filed complaints with the Department of Labor and Industry, charging city officials with failure to pay city employes.

The mayor's "plebiscite" ballot will have a statement on its cover referring to the numerous losses in revenue from the various projects and the increased expense of maintaining institutions.

MAYOR'S STATEMENT

Underneath a list of these items the mayor's message will be:

"This places before you the true picture of our city showing the major causes of our staggering tax rate.

"With this gloomy picture of our city's affairs it is our sworn duty to face the grim reality. Sentiment, friendship and political expediency must be totally excluded in our attempt to rehabilitate our neglected community.

"It is time for hard straightforward thinking of our serious problems. Clear headedness and common sense must be applied toward their solution. I am one of those who subscribe to the theory of more recent origin, 'To the victor belongs the responsibility of good government.' WILLIAM E. KANE, Mayor."

Inside the ballot sheet will be 14 questions with "yes" and "no" spaces beside them for marking the crosses.

7 in Family Stricken by Faulty Pork

A Brighton mother and her six children today were reported by city health authorities to have been stricken with trichinosis, intestinal disease caused by infected pork.

The affected persons are Mrs Rose Marra, Amando, 12; Bruno 11; Valentino, 10; Cosmo, 8; John 6 and Josephine 1 year old. The family live on Western avenue Brighton.

The seven were taken ill last Friday from meat, authorities said. Mrs. Marra stated was purchased from a Boston wholesale dealer. She and Amando are still bedridden although not in serious condition. The others were only slightly stricken.

Dr. Fred J. Bailey, deputy health commissioner, began an immediate investigation when he learned of the outbreak. He said he would personally examine the victims and would trace the meat to learn if other consumers used the tainted supply.

Trichinosis is a disease caused by parasites which pass from the intestinal tract to the muscles, causing muscular soreness, swollen and inflamed eyes and severe head pains.

One of every 70 hogs contains the parasites and the only way to eliminate the chance of illness is to cook pork thoroughly at a temperature of 140 degrees Fahrenheit, according to medical authorities.

Asylum Trustees Consider Charges

Trustees of Medfield State Hospital met today to consider a recommendation of Patrick J. Moynihan for removal of Superintendent Earl K. Holt as well as other sweeping hospital changes.

Moynihan, chairman of the state commission on administration and finance, reported to Governor Hurley that "laxity, incompetence and irregularities" existed and sought a change in management and personnel to restore morale.

Meanwhile, in a prepared statement, State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley again took issue with Moynihan over conflicting audits on state mental hospitals.

NEW BUCKLEY BLAST

"I cannot quite reconcile the attitude of Chairman Moynihan in criticizing so severely the administration at Medfield and the Boston State Hospital for the same irregular practices which were condoned by him and his outside firm of accountants in connection with the Westboro State Hospital," Buckley declared.

Asserting that his own criticism of Westboro and other institutions was made in a remedial spirit Buckley said Moynihan's report showed similar conditions at Medfield, Boston, Westboro and other institutions.

The thrust of definite action was given today by Moynihan prior to meeting with the trustees. He stated that unless the board took necessary action he would make other definite recommendations Monday.

DR. TROXELL NAMED

Dr. J. Allen Troxel assistant superintendent was named by Moynihan in connection with the transfer and subsequent death of a male patient from the hospital infirmary "because the patient was annoying one or more patients seriously ill in the infirmary at the time."

The report stated Dr. Troxel ordered the 68-year-old patient bundled into a stretcher 21 hours after a major operation and had him carried across the campus.

Moynihan refused to accept in full Buckley's charges in respect to burials in potter's field of 30 inmates in disregard of statutes and common decency.

Officials Clash Over Records On 'Gift Jobs'

Probe Group Lawyer's Threat on Summons Wins Argument

Long smoldering antipathy, resulting from the recent arrest of alleged graft ring under the state unemployment compensation commission was revealed today to have led to a heated session between two officials concerned in the probe, it also.

They were Warren Potter, State Labor Relations Board agent, and counsel to the special investigating committee appointed to investigate the charges of graft against Chairman P. Harrington of the Unemployment Board.

Heat arose between the two before Atty. Paton demanded access to certain board records which Harrington refused to allow him to see, it was learned by the Boston Evening American.

THREATS PAVE WAY

The argument resulted by Attorney Paton's threatening to call Harrington before the legislative committee was he allowed access to the records.

The lawyer reasonable would ask preparation for public hearings on the charges which investigation Honey maintains are motivated by Republican politics as part of their gubernatorial campaign.

HEARINGS NEXT WEEK

He said it was learned obtained statements from 12 employees of the unemployment board which will take a big part in the inquiry. Hearings are expected to start within a week.

The inquiry was urged by the Legislature after it was charged numerous [illegible] employees had been given jobs by the commission in violation of civil service regulations.

Turtles Koussevitzky Pets

'They're Nice People,' Says Maestro, Back From Florida

By RUTH MARSTERS

Billy the Crocodile and turtles "that by now" were the subject of an interview with Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, returned after an absence of four weeks to conduct this afternoon's concert in Symphony Hall.

Perhaps it was the spring day,—perhaps it was the thought that another New York season was completed (last weekend) with undiluted success,—perhaps it was just that the rehearsal had gone so well.

At any rate a strenuous romp through the Sibelius first Symphony, a swift and cursory glance at the Beethoven first, found Dr. Koussevitzky mopping his brow in that delicate and familiar gesture, drinking a glass of water from a thermos that the Madame had at hand and refusing to be serious.

During his month's absence from Boston the conductor has found time to wend up the orchestra's out of town engagements (except for a single concert in Worcester) and to vacation for two weeks at Winter Park, Florida.

According to his own report he has done nothing but enjoy the sun and feed Billy the Alligator. The latter ate out of his hand, (it is assumed the turtles did not, nothing having been said about it.)

Dr. Koussevitzky includes both turtles and crocodiles in his enthusiastic approval however. "They are such nice people" was his way of putting it.

Dr. Koussevitzky's audiences this week end will find him looking tremendously fit.

$320 Alimony Due; Jail Yawns

Ex-Wife in Ill Health, She Tells Court

Charles L. Temple, Haverhill trucking company owner, today was faced with a jail term unless he complies with an edict of Judge Harry E. Dow of Salem probate court to pay his wife $320 back alimony.

Mrs. Lillian M., Temple of Boston asked Judge Dow to compel her divorced husband to pay alimony regularly "because it won't be for very long." She said she was ill and did not expect to live much longer.

"I've been threatening you for 18 years," Judge Dow told Temple. "I sent you to jail once and it did some good," the jurist continued. "This is your last chance. If you ever are brought before me again for failing to pay this woman her money I am going to send you to jail."

The couple were divorced in 1926.

Stone Quiz Balk Move Charged

Three members of the joint legislative committee on rules were attempting to block the probe into the conduct of Judge Arthur P. Stone, it was charged today by Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware.

The charge by Rep. Mr. Sawyer himself a member of the committee, was made to the Boston Evening American, and the blocking attempt, he said, began as far back as nearly two weeks ago.

This was when an executive meeting was held at the Boston City Club, but efforts of the trio were overridden by a majority of the committee, Rep. Mr. Sawyer said.

Now the three members, he asserted, are endeavoring to block the appearance of Judge Stone before the committee, a matter which will be decided at a meeting of the group next Thursday morning.

Employes of City Escape Pay Cuts

Through a clause written into Mayor Tobin's $9,000,000 loan bill by the legislative committee on municipal finance, city employes today were assured there would be no immediate cuts in their pay.

YOU CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

Breath of April Meadows

ALL BLOOMING things have a kinship with the breath of living creatures . . . and if it's as natural as fresh green grass, the fragrance that rises from unfolding petals and uncurling leaves, then it's the really attainable ideal.

And desirable as all natural loveliness is—like the wholesome charm of Betty Grable—it's worth your expending every effort in achieving it. Arline Gould tells about a discovery that enhances your reputation for immaculacy.

Spicy Fragrance Is Feature of Man-Sponsored Mouthwash

BY ARLINE GOULD

THEY SAY that men discovered a remarkable new mouth refreshant in the club washroom and introduced its fragrance to their wives' in the home-coming kiss. Then we further understand that women started to beseech the makers for some—it being available only in the impenetrable locker rooms and an occasional men's wear store—and today a Boston shop is offering it in the perfumed purlieus of its toiletry section!

Be that as it may, it is ruby-colored, stuff with an odor fresh as the first shoots of mint . . . it is no stronger than the scent of the earlier flowers, always the most delicately perfumed . . . there's a refreshing hint of anise . . . and for all this general, appealing mildness it is said to do a speedy, thoroughly efficient job of refreshing the breath.

It is an astringent cleanser for the mouth and gums, and leaves you feeling as though you'd been drinking nothing stronger than spring water! Dentists use it.

Mildly antiseptic as it is, you'll find that regularly swishing and gargling with it helps ward off incipient colds and sore throat and automatically takes care of any little abrasions or cuts on the inside of the mouth.

Mothers with the problem of impressing mouth hygiene principles on the juniors will find there's no inducement like the pleasant flavor of the wash.

We're also told that this is one of the most thrifty rinses you can use. Three or four drops in a quarter glass of lukewarm water give about the right solution. And a four-ounce bottle equals five gallons in use.

If you'd like to learn the name of this last word in hygienic mouth washes which banishes the strongest odors, and the Boston shop which has just acquired it, phone Arline Gould, Liberty 4000 week days until 5, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Let Neighbors Talk; Shut Ears to Gossip

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

It's surprising the number of people who suffer martyrdom because other people gossip about them, truthfully or untruthfully.

If the tattling is true, time will wash it out; if it's untrue, "you should worry."

The following letter is typical.

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"My daughter broke her engagement to a very undesirable young man, and her father and I were very happy about it. His mother and sister had put him through college at considerable expense, and it seemed impossible for him to keep a job or make up his mind about what he wanted to do next. He drank, played the races and went about with doubtful women.

"I could tell you more, but that's enough to let you know how relieved we were when the engagement was broken.

"But malicious gossip started to the effect that my daughter had been jilted. At first she paid no attention to it but it grew and grew until now it has got her.

"She doesn't want to go out and meet people, and she doesn't want to go away from home because she says people will think she's afraid to face the situation.

"So she stays home, broods and is losing her health and good looks. Why can't she be sensible and laugh it off?

"ANXIOUS MOTHER."

Why, indeed? Why can't we let malicious gossip roll off us like water off a duck's back?

BUT IT'S SO MUCH EASIER TO GIVE UP, DRIFT INTO MARTYRDOM, THAN TO TAKE IDLE GOSSIP ON THE CHIN WITH A SMILE.

If the daughter could assume an attitude of gay, nonchalant amusement over the talk of being jilted, it would soon lose it savor.

Several years ago, the daughter of a high official in Washington was actually jilted. Her engagement had been announced, and the man eloped with another woman. But there was no evidence of wakeful nights or dolorous days on the face of the girl who had been forsaken. She went everywhere, and apparently was having the time of her life.

IT WAS A LESSON

A particularly vicious old woman, whose sharp tongue made her feared and hated, met the girl at a reception and, to call attention to her having been jilted, said:

"I hear you're going to be married."

"I hear you're not," chirped back the forsaken young thing, with her most engaging smile.

After that no one felt like running the risk of a similar thrust. They accepted the girl at her own face value.

No matter what you do or what you don't do, you'll never escape the gossip of someone who happens to feel like passing the buck that day.

And if you're ever going to have any peace of mind, you've got to cultivate an indifference, real or simulated. BUT YOUR INDIFFERENCE MUST BE A GROWTH OF YOUR OWN CULTIVATION.

WEIGHT CAN CHANGE VOICE

By IDA JEAN KAIN

IT TAKES someone who cannot speak the technical language to make television seem as real as the old horsehair sofa and stereoptican slides. Mme. Bovy, the opera singer—and a beauty, by the way—has been a television enthusiast ever since she was invited to make the first test in France. After talking with her we expect any day to be able to turn a dial and see the world perform.

When that happens, Mme. Bovy predicts, we are going to be more weight and figure conscious than ever, because television is like a closeup on the screen. But don't think for a minute that the opera singers will be unable to hold their own in this new field.

Mme. Bovy, blonde and streamlined, is an excellent representative of the new order of opera stars. They learned several years ago that great deal of weight is not the bulwark of a powerful voice. On the contrary, it causes shortness of breath! Today most of the singers are streamlined . . ."

And if you think you have a struggle to keep your weight down, just listen to this: "The opera singer is constantly being invited to parties where delicious food is served," Mme. Bovy says, "so that she could easily eat twice as often and twice as much as the average person. In the old days a singer would let herself take on too much weight and then all at once she would try to reduce. Of course, the drastic reducing affected her health and voice and she would decide it was better to be fat. Now when a singer has reason to suspect she might take on weight, she immediately cuts down on food. Only the comic figure is big and fat."

Singing is not the only endurance test for Mme. Bovy. During her holidays on the Riviera she swims for hours every day, rides a watercycle and then, for a change, goes over into Italy for some skiing. But swimming is her favorite recreation and she recommends it heartily for beautifying the figure.

As you might point out, it is not always possible to swim, and for those times Mme. Bovy depends on a set of Swedish gymnastics, a sample of which follows: Stand with the feet slightly apart, arms held straight out in front of the body, chest-level, and fists clenched. With vigorous movements from the shoulders, cross the clenched fists, alternating right and left, over each other. Work up to fifty counts. "This is a very good exercise for the poitrine (chest plate)," Mme. Bovy says.

Infantile Fight Progress

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

RECENTLY the nation celebrated the President's birthday. As you know, this genius of money-making parties is held each year to promote the fight against infantile paralysis. Much has been accomplished to this end by the generous contributions to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Every parent dreads the very name of infantile paralysis. Many of us recall the fear we had for our youngsters during recent epidemics.

Do not be coaxed to believe either, that infantile paralysis is under control. On the contrary, it is ever on the increase. As a matter of fact, there have been increasing in frequency and in severity.

This terrible ailment strikes without warning. As a rule, it at a sure means of combating the ease, but no age is immune to its ravages. Many an adult has suffered its effects.

Not only is there a threat to life, but many of the cases result in partial and permanent deformity. The complications of the disease are not so severe as in former years, but the menace is always present.

These facts indicate how necessary it is to continue to make possible the research work in infantile paralysis. This must continue until tacks children under 10 years of disease is known. At the moment we do not even know for sure how the disease is transmitted. Of course, no method of prevention has been discovered.

VAN WYCK MASON'S The CASTLE ISLAND CASE with CANDID CAMERA CLUES by HENRY CLAY GIPSON

"In my camera is a plate especially sensitive to infra red rays." Deliberately he scanned the semi-circle of faces.—Peter. Poor little Peter.—"This, ladies and gentlemen, is the identical apparatus I hid in the library last night—a room with a door which all of you knew couldn't be locked. A trigger switch was arranged beneath the belt so that when it was moved, the shutter clicked and at the same instant the photoflash bulbs exploded. But, because of the infra red filters, not one trace of white light reached the library to warn the criminal."

"Say, what is this?" Terry James snapped, then settled back with a half laugh. "It's a bluff. It's a bluff isn't it, Gail?"

"I don't know," the girl replied heavily. "Nothing seems to matter much any more."

Ward said, "But surely, the thief must have seen some light or a shadow."

"Even invisible light causes shadow," Allenby stated. "You'll see them on the print—two of them. One for each light box. But not with the naked eye."

"Pray proceed, Major," Sir George's voice boomed out as, absently, he mopped his forehead. "This is the most interesting lecture I've attended since leaving Oxford."

"I am now going to turn out the lights and have the windows covered. All right?" Allenby called. Promptly gray clad legs and heavy police boots became visible in the game room's areaway windows.

"Who's that out there?" Kathleen asked in a breathless tone.

THE TRAP SPRINGS

"Just a couple of policemen, Miss Manalip. They've been told to hang heavy blankets over those two windows. In order to achieve the best results, not a trace of white light should reach the infra red plate."

In a moment, darkness so complete as to be almost tangible descended and out of it Allenby's voice spoke crisply.

"Will all of you please sit still? I'm taking it now!" The hair at the base of his head tingled as, during a split seconds, he delayed touching off the apparatus.

How badly he wanted reactions. A swift faint movement struck his ear and, simultaneously, he threw the camera's switch. "Thank you, everybody."

"What?" Cora Sue cried. "But Major, you can't have taken it. Ah didn't see any infra red."

"Remarkable," Sir George observed in a taut voice, "it it comes out, I say, Major, how soon can you give us visible proof of your—er—wizardry?"

"In about half an hour," Allenby replied as blankets were removed from the windows and a group of decidedly uneasy looking people were disclosed.

Who had moved so quickly just as he had pretended to snap the picture? Had his camera captured what sounded like an involuntary movement? Biting his lips, Allenby paused in the hall just long enough to warn Lunt and Turner not to relax their vigilance a moment. He urged a similar alertness on Tyson and the C. I. D. inspector.

"Unless the criminal has an uncommon amount of nerve," he warned "anything can happen now."

At a swift trot he sought the heat house and presently heavily disappeared into his jerry-built dark room.

"If you've achieved nothing else you've certainly got Grafton and the rest in a fine state," Tyson commented when Allenby reappeared from his labors. "Any results?"

Grimly Roger Allenby nodded. "Yes. It's pretty plain. In this picture, Superintendent, you see the criminal surprised."

THE KILLER!

A low whistle burst from Tyson's lips. "How in the world did you catch your suspect in such a pose?"

"When I said I had taken the picture I actually waited a fraction of an instant for a reaction. Thus we see our criminal when it first dawned that I really might have taken a picture in the library. It was bluff of a sort, but it worked."

Tyson frowned, drew a deep breath, sharply beckoned Boyd and murmured some direction. "We'll be in the library."

In the background Allenby looked up from the careful packing of his pipe. "Be careful, Inspector, and have Lunt watch Mr. Grafton."

"Right" The two policemen disappeared.

Presently, C Townley Ward almost jauntily strode into the library. "Well, what can I do to help you, Mr. Tyson?"

"In the matter of an arrest Mr. Ward."

"Arrest" Really? Whom do you want?"

Allenby put down his pipe and like a good boxer balanced his weight on the balls of his feet before he said in a harsh voice, "You—for the murders of Patricia Fortier and Barbara Grafton."

Clip the Camera Clues

The big man before Tyson's desk changed his expression not a whit, even smiled. "Cut the comedy. This is utterly absurd. Have you gone off your nut, Allenby?" He trained a baleful look on the silver haired police superintendent. "You will regret ever having listened to this meddler."

"I wonder, Mr. Ward, I wonder?" Tyson replied.

On recognizing a sudden gleam in Ward's blue eyes, Allenby let his hand very casually came to rest in his coat pocket and drew out some snapshots.

"You did a neat job on Patricia, but really you'd so made some very stupid mistakes. That Wanga was the worst of them. Why waste time trying to divert suspicion to poor Creepy? You'd have done better to pick a nightgown mistake the one Patricia was wearing when she stabbed her and let it go at that."

You can't prove any of this," Ward heaped but some of his assurance faded. As for that what you call Wanga, who do you think I might have put up to it."

His Brave Words Sweep On

By ELSIE ROBINSON

HE THAT GIVETH HIS LIFE SHALL KEEP IT!

That strange, brief triumph Jesus knew six days before He died. We muse the mystery, often, for the waving of the palms.

Now at last He had conquered. Or so it seemed to those who thronged the narrow streets of Bethany.

What memories must have filled Him as He heard those songs and cries! Memories of three hard years, all racked with pain and loneliness . . . fierce persecution . . . and misunderstanding, sharper than a knife.

Stared at and spat on by the ones who'd known Him as a lad . . . who said he had become a cheat and a charlatan. Spied on by Roman soldiers and the Hebrew priests. An outcast "without a place to lay His head."

But now the tide had turned!

The story of His miracles had swept the land. How He had driven devils into herds or swine . . . and given sight again to those who'd been born blind . . . and cleaned the loathsome leper's flesh . . . and raised their neighbor Lazarus from death!

SURELY SUCH MARVELS PROVED HE WAS A GOD . . . THE LONG-AWAITED "SAVIOUR OF THE JEWS"!

And now He rested overnight in Bethany, to go tomorrow to Jerusalem where six days hence the Jews would hold the Passover.

And hearing He was there, the crowd had swarmed in from the desert, down from gullied hills, and from the sea . . . to touch and hail and welcome their new King.

And all night long they'd peered and cheered and watched beside their fires. And with the morning they had brought an ass that He might ride as fitted kingly state . . . and passed out palms for all the throng to wave. And so He started, on wild waves of song . . . on cheers where, but a few days since He'd known jeers.

JESUS THE KING! THEY BORE HIM TO HIS THRONE

But in His Heart, He knew they bore Him to His death.

And that these very ones who now were waving palms, and tussling to see which one should kiss His feet, would shortly follow, when He went to die, and shout as loudly as when they saw His blood!

Yet, even so, His pitying heart went out. And He saw many deaths beside His own.

The deaths of those who also die betrayed . . . of those who, also, give their lives in love . . . of those who labor truly, giving all they have yet in this cruel world find no reward.

He thought of those . . . of all their hopeless pain . . . and how there was no one to comfort them.

And so, while hundreds shouted and the green palms waved, He bent—and looked upon worn flesh and faded eyes—and gave the sweetest comfort ever God gave man.

"I do not think that it is all in vain," He said, "Do not think you have suffered for nothing, and sacrificed for nothing, and given all you have without recompense. For, though some say you have wasted yourselves, I say you have saved yourselves. And though some may say you are lost, I say you are saved!

"Verily, verily I say unto you—Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. He that loveth this life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal."

Then He was still. And there came only the soft rustling of the palms.

BUT DOWN THE AGES, HIS BRAVE WORDS SWEEP ON.

Dache Quilts Leather

TAKE almost any smartly, simply cut coat or suit this spring—clap on your head the maddest idea in a bonnet that you can find, tuck under your arm a bag that matches its madness—and your reputation for chic is made! The sort of thing we're talking about is what Lilly Dache does to the King's taste, to a turn, to the ultimate—or to whatever point you consider is the peak of swellness. But it has to be done marvelously, if at all. For there's madness and there's insanity. And you can always trust the Mme. to steer clear of the latter. Sheer inspiration is Chinese gold kidskin in a bag big as a small sofa pillow, and a beret flat as dime. Anachronistic but terrifically smart is the surprise combination of a snood in back. A Boston shop has these Dache creations, or can order them.—ANNICE BRINK.

Suggestions for Your Sunday Dinner

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WMEX

Another week-end has rolled around with the attendant marketing and meal planning. What shall we have for Sunday dinner? Well, that shouldn't be difficult with the wealth of material we have to choose from these days.

We're suggesting roast duckling for dinner accompanied by a molded cranberry salad. Does that appeal to spring appetites? All we have to decide about just at present is the type of stuffing to be used. Let's have an old fashioned herb stuffing since we've all been thinking about the herb gardens we're going to plant this year.

Now for the method of cooking the duck for dinner. Each housemaker seems to have her own particular method. We prefer to drain off some of the fat as it is rendered out. Here's a method vouched for by the people who grow ducks for the market.

HOW TO ROAST DUCK

Dress a good sized duckling and wash thoroughly in cold water, retaining a little baking soda. Cut away the neck as close to the body as possible, drawing the skin of the neck over the back and fastening with a skewer. Add the neck to the giblets to be used in making the gravy. Fill the body of the bird with your favorite stuffing. One of the old fashioned herb stuffings is needed here and sew or skewer together. Tie or skewer the legs close to the sides of the bird. Fasten the wings down toward the back and skewer them into place. If possible avoid tying the skewers. If this must be done, let the strings be put across the breast.

Rub the duckling with equal parts of butter and flour creamed together until smooth and pepper. Place in a baking pan preferably on a rack, breast down.

The oven should be hot—from 400 to 450 degrees F. Cook until the color begins to turn brown, reduce the heat to 325 degrees F. and roast more slowly. Baste occasionally with one-fourth cup butter dissolved in one cup water. When half done turn the duckling on its side, the breast to brown. Allow 2½ minutes to the pound. Before serving remove the skewers. Take the duckling on a large platter and garnish with watercress and radish roses or with your favorite relish. Pass the giblet gravy.

CRANBERRY MOLD

1 package lemon gelatine
½ cup finely cut celery
1 cup canned cranberry sauce
1½ cups warm water
½ cup canned crushed pineapple

Dissolve the gelatine in warm water. Chill in automatic refrigerator food compartment. When slightly thickened add celery, pineapple, and cranberry sauce. Turn into individual molds. Serve on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

OLD FASHIONED HERB STUFFING

1 small loaf day old bread pulled into small flakes
1 tablespoon crumbled sage
1 tablespoon crumbled thyme or 4 bay leaves
½ onion, chopped fine
½ cup finely chopped celery
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Mix dry ingredients thoroughly. Moisten with 3 tablespoons of butter dissolved in one cup of water. And egg may be added, but this is not necessary. The giblets chopped fine may be added to the stuffing or they may be used in making the giblet gravy.

GIBLET GRAVY

When the duckling is thoroughly done, brown and crisp on the outside and juices run well, pour off the fat, drain off all the excess fat, except two tablespoons. Blend in one tablespoon of flour, one-fifth teaspoon paprika, three pepper, a tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce and the chopped giblets. To prepare the giblets, wash them thoroughly, cut off the neck close to the body and wing tips and cook in one cup of hot water until tender. Chop coarsely before adding to the gravy.

Mrs. Beeckman on Manners

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My girl friend is to be married very soon and as there are several showers planned for her I would like to make mine a little different. My idea is to ask each guest to contribute a certain amount, with which I will purchase a gift useful to the bride.

1. Will you kindly advise me as to an appropriate gift for this type of shower?

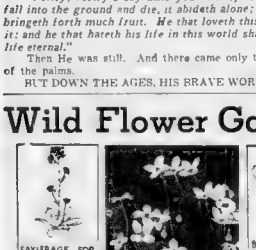
2. Please tell me when the invitations should be sent? What kind of invitations should they be? K.

1. I think a perfect type of gift to buy for a shower of this kind would be some electrical accessory for the new home, perhaps an accessory for buffet service.

2. Since there are several showers planned for this time your invitations should be sent out at least two weeks in advance of the shower. I suggest that you write the invitations on semi-note paper.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Wild Flower Garden



SAXIFRAGE FOR ROCK GARDENS
BLOODROOT FOR SHADY PLACES
MARSH-MARIGOLD FOR LILY-POOL BORDERS
LADY'S SLIPPER (WILD ORCHID) FOR MOIST GROUND

WHAT a boon wild flowers can be to your garden. Where cultivated beauties sulk, wild flowers bloom sweetly and sturdily, grateful for a little care.

How to get them these days? Your seed dealer carries many varieties—or perhaps you've a friend with plants to spare.

Charming for an uncut edge of your lawn or a rock garden is the adorable bluet in our photograph. You see it everywhere in early spring, growing in cheery patches of blue, lilac or white.

Or perhaps you've a shaded patch that's always been a problem. Try wild flowers born to the woodland—the dainty, spring-beauty with its pink and white blossoms, the tulip-like bloodroot a native herb.

To give your lily pool border that natural wooden look—plant the wind-seeding into the depression and and Harry and Dicky bent down seeding over something that has and picked with pearl of color at never the outlook seemed better. It the unconscious occupier. Lucie dead.

"Is Grimby down there?" we heard Harry. Under we dimly saw then an exhibarrassed

"Yes, sir!" How breathing Grimby and man. Can you hear me?"

We found we could answer but the rear man we saw him with Jerry helping him into the stretcher and getting ready. Then they descended into the depression and a second after Harry ells on.

Underwood's voice called:

"Dicky safe for you? Dicky there for a minute, Dicky?"

Coast seems clear." Dicky said and Lil an and I said with one accord, "Get down there quickly. We'll take care of ourselves."

He half withdrew his hand from his coat pocket, but Lilian said quickly, "You needn't bother. I have everything that it takes."

"O. K." Dicky responded, and on the word hurried into the underbrush and joined the others. It was but a few seconds before they all came out again, our husbands Jim and Jerry Tyler, each at a corner of the stretcher. When they reached the level place where we stood, they set their burden down

"Dammit. Leave my head a one I can."

"Grimby!" Harry Underwood shouted as if the man were deaf. "Are you really all right?"

"No thanks to those babies in that shack that I am," Grimby said sowls, painfully. "They thought they'd killed me with the first whack, but I played possum and—" His voice trailed away as Harry Underwood spoke with crisp de

"Not another word" he said. The rest of the sleep can wait, but I we get you to the house and have you looked after properly

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 575

I THINK a shiver went down a our spines as Jerry Tyler pointed a tremulous hand at a particularly tangled piece of undergrowth and said huskily, "In there!"

"One of us must stay here with the women," Harry Underwood said to Lucie. "Mind, I don't want to be responsible for putting Grimby on the job and I, for one, expect to be the one to find him if he really is dead."

"Of course. Dicky said quickly, responding to the desperateness in his friend's voice. "Take Jim and Jerry with you."

"Yes, I do want them both," Mr. Underwood said. "Here, Jerry, carry this first aid kit and don't drop it. I hope to heaven we need it. But I want both hands free."

He plunged into the underbrush followed by Jim and Jerry, and Dicky looked up into the sky and at the surrounding trees.

"There aren't any crows, anyway," he said. "Through the grimness of the comment, I saw a gleam of hope, though as we watched Harry and the others de-

Jack Stafford Talks On Bowling Growth | Hearst Tourney Nears Climax

By JACK CONWAY

JACK STAFFORD was the official greeter when I visited the Huntington Club to get a close-up of the action in the Hearst bowling tournament being conducted by the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser.

Mr. Boston

When I first knew Stafford, he was an American League umpire. It is very evident baseball still has a warm spot in Jack's heart after you look at pictures and cartoons of diamond heroes in his private office at the Huntington Club.

"There has been more action in the Hearst bowling tournament than in an extra inning ball game," declared Stafford with enthusiasm. "More than 5000 persons have entered and they have set up some amazing scores."

Outside of Stafford's office I found Joe Grant, one of the leading bowling leaders in New England.

"I have been studying the different types of people who have been competing in this tournament," said Joe. "Last night one of the New Hampshire teams had two judges, three lawyers, a minister and 20 business men in its membership.

"There have been numerous church and social club groups competing."

As we talked, a dozen schoolboys hurried past us. Their eyes were bright with the fire of youth, while they were well dressed.

Two schoolmasters were with the group.

"I am afraid some of the boys will beat us," said one of the schoolmasters.

"That gives you an idea of the forward steps taken by bowling," declared Grant. "Hundreds of school children, both girls and boys, have competed. Many of their mothers and fathers have come to the Huntington Club with them, and have also participated in the tournament. These girls and boys will be the champion bowlers of tomorrow."

Scenery and Color Help Tournament

JACK STAFFORD joined me as I roamed through the Japanese room into the Gold Room and then on into the High School room. Each room had bright, gay decorations.

"The scenery and decorations remind me of the theater," I told Stafford.

"You must give bowlers a touch of the theatrical," replied Stafford. "We keep the place dolled up, and our patrons like it that way.

"With all classes now going in for bowling one must make a bowling alley as attractive as a private club."

There are 66 alleys in the Huntington Club, and each of them was occupied by contestants in the Hearst tournament

Walter Kiley of the sports staff of this newspaper called my attention to the high scores that have been made.

"I do not write my story of the tournament for the following day until the last string is bowled each night," said Walter. "One night I wrote my lead a bit early, and had to change it over when ten different bowlers came along with brilliant scores."

There were numerous teams on hand from all sections of New England. Some of the bowlers had come to Boston from towns in Maine that are close to the Canadian border.

Professional Stars Seek Prizes

ONE OF the high spots in the tournament will be reached tonight when more than 60 crack men bowlers who have received the rating of professional start competing for rich money prizes. The finals will take place tomorrow night when the women professionals will also compete.

"We placed the better bowlers in these special professional classes," asserted Stafford. "This gives them an opportunity to compete against men and women of equal ability and experience.

"The open classes are then left for the average club bowlers."

In addition to the money prizes in the professional classes, there are $4000 worth of other prizes, according to Walter Kiley.

With so many prizes, it would appear as if there was a reward for every first-class bowler.

Bowling Top Winter Sport

THE CROWDS at hockey games, ice carnivals, boxing and wrestling matches and other winter sports affairs are small in comparison to the number of people who bowl each week.

"There are millions of bowlers," said Joe Grant. "Years ago most of the bowlers were men. Now there are also millions of women and youngsters bowling."

Grant's statement explains the growth of bowling. Bowling has captivated the ladies. The girls now have their own teams.

Turner Unhittable From Third on Against Nats

By BILL GRIMES

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 8—"One of the reasons for Jim Turner and Lon Fette being off form this spring is that they have done more running than pitching," declared Casey Stengel, manager of the Bees, on our way up from Jacksonville this morning.

"Turner and Fette won twenty games each last season," continued Casey, "so it was but natural that they felt they didn't need as much work on the mound as some of the other hurlers. As a result, when they were sent to the hilltop, they lacked control.

WILD TWO INNINGS

"Now take the case of Mike Ba as and Milt Shoffner, neither of them was certain he would be retained with the club.

"They did their share of shagging flies but they spent more time pitching than chasing around the outfield. The result is that they have control.

"If they hadn't shown to better advantage than either Turner or Fette they'd probably both be on their way by now.

"Take Turner's exhibition down there in Orlando. He was so wild for two innings that he was behind practically every hitter. Then, when he was obliged to get the ball in there, the Senators teed off on him.

"I can't tell me that Washington can get to Turner for seven hits and five runs in two innings. Jim was unable to get his pitches low, and he got his arm pinned back until he caught up with that old 'command.'

"From the third inning on, the Senators made just one hit off Turner. Wes Ferrell, who was invincible for four innings, gradually tired, and we slicked him for two home runs, a triple and four singles during the fifth, sixth and seventh frames.

"I've never been able to get a kick out of any game my teams took, whether they were competing in the Grapefruit or the National Leagues, but I have no criticism to make on the showing of the Bees on the final game in Florida.

"They showed me they are a game aggregation. They were trailing five runs as the end of the second inning, but they stayed right in there, and but for a freak catch on the part of Al Simmons off Di Maggio in the ninth, we'd have beaten that outfit for the third straight time."

LANNING TODAY

Accompanied by the Washington Senators, the Bees pulled out of Orlando on a special train last night for Jacksonville, where they slept in their cars and were picked up by a through train early this morning and taken to this town.

Johnny Lanning will attempt to go the distance today against Chick Autrey of Savannah Tars. In the event Johnny experiences trouble, Dick Errickson will be called upon to relieve.

Due to the fact that Autrey is molding together a new machine, Stengel will make many replacements during the course of the game.

The Bees will leave here tomorrow morning by bus for Barnwell, Ga., which is about 90 miles north. Stengel will leave eight players here for two days as the bus accommodations are limited.

The squad is in great condition and unless bad weather is encountered on the trip north will be in the well known pink, when it arrives at National League Field one week from today.

Outsiders Start In NYMA Grind

The race is sanctioned by the New England A A. U. and is opened to any runner who has not won a prize in competition.

Entries will remain open until next Wednesday with Manager Bernard J. Higgins at 14 John Eliot square.

Table Tennis Aces Perform at Arena

Miss Aarons, World Champion, Heads Glittering Cast

Leading the greatest collection of international table tennis stars ever assembled, Ruth Hughes Aarons, queen of the net stars, headlines a brilliant show at the Arena tonight—the opening match scheduled for 8:15.

Miss Aarons gained her laurels by defeating every competitor in the United States and then journeying to Czechoslovakia to annex the world's title.

Besides a collection of trick shots, Miss Aarons' repertoire includes a marvelous defense which enables her to retrieve smashing drives 20 to 30 feet from the table.

Another star who will make an appearance is Laszlo Belisk, the Nick Allrock of table tennis, who obtained leave from the Hungarian army to defend his U. S. title.

Belisk is the master of spin and angle shots and has been runner up three times at world championships.

Sandor Glancz, former world's champion, and the most copied player in the game, is another of the stars who will compete.

Other competitors include Louis Pagliaro, New York champion; Johnny Abrahams, victor in the U. S. mixed doubles, and Les Lowry Newton, big school senior.

Ol' Sarge Bagby Roots for Junior To Star With Sox

Big Leagues Have Yet to See Son Of Immortal Make Grade

By JOE CASHMAN

GREENSBORO, No. Car., April 8—No right-handed pitcher has won 30 games over an American League season since Sergeant Jim Bagby turned the trick for the world champion Cleveland Indians of 1920.

The old "Sarge," now the portly proprietor of a cleaning establishment in Atlanta, prides himself on this record, but he doesn't talk much about it.

He's too occupied in his spare moments, dreaming of the possibility of gaining another distinction which will bring him more fame than did any of his pitching feats.

Ol' Jim was no big fish fair to succeed where every other diamond star [illegible] failed.

ONE BIT OF ADVICE

For Businessman Bagby, almost needless to say, is none other than the father of James C. Bagby, Jr., who now ranks as one of the most promising pitching prospects found by the Red Sox since papa Bagby was in his prime.

Why a Walter Johnson son wasn't able to pitch up an alley, why an Ed Walsh boy had little to recommend him except his father's name—why a Ty Cobb male offspring took to tennis—why, in short the natural pastime of baseball over sixty years didn't get one real chip off an old block is a question that's never been satisfactorily answered.

However, after talking with Jim Bagby Sr., over in Spartanburg, while the Sox and Reds were being kept idle by wet grounds, we'll say that maybe too much parental advice had a lot to do with failure of so many sons to follow in the baseball footsteps of their parents.

At least, the O. Sarge revealed that the only advice he ever gave Jim, Jr. was not to permit a batter to get too cocky up there at the plate.

"Otherwise," continued the proud father, "Jim has been on his own.

"He doesn't hold the ball nor deliver it like I did. He has a style all his own.

"He's much faster than I was. That surprises me, too. Starting out he couldn't break a pane of glass with his fast ball. Now he really has one."

McKAIN UP TODAY

"Cronin tells me the boy has a good schedule. I sure hope does right. I've always wanted Jim to make bigger name for himself in the majors than I did. But I always refrained from trying to mould him to my image."

The mercury will have to soar some 30 points in a hurry, or the only hurling Archie McKain and Derringer will do this p m w. be in the Hotel lobby.

Monty' Plays With Von Elm

Mystery Man Shoots 64 With Partner

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., April 8 (INS)—Lured from self-imposed seclusion by the California Open Golf championship, John Montague comes out of retirement tomorrow for the first time since becoming a legend of the links.

The internationally fabled "Paul Bunyan of Hollywood's fairways" teamed with Georges Von Elm to finish among the leaders in the pro-amateur event at Stockdale Country Club.

Shooting 61, 11 under par, Phil Finley and John McCorkie tied for first.

"Monty" and Von Elm made it foursome with Howard Hawks, wealthy movie director, and Willie Hunter, former British amateur champion and now a professional, in Santa Monica.

Montague has set his heart on competing in the British Open championship this year. Believing he needed competition to get his game back into shape, he chose the California Open as a starter.

Monty's game suffered after his legendary fame destroyed his career, but it matured amazingly during the ruin, and he was tried and acquitted as a robbery suspect in Jay County, N. Y.

Although the Montague-Von Elm combination was a potent one, it faced an almost impossible task in attempting to humble the team of Tom Maguire, Bakersfield amateur, and Harry Basehart, Long Beach pro and Northern California open champion.

The latter two players had already turned in a best ball score of 62, ten under par, to come in second in the preliminary to the State open. W. P. Winham also scored a 62.

Montague and Von Elm tied for third place with four other players. They shot 64.

Two-Day Classic Spices Hearst Tourney

Chiminello, Poehler, Haley, Sanborn In Lists

By WALTER KILEY

Most anticipated championship bowling classic, between 80 and 100 of New England's greatest male stars take to the Huntington Club alleys at 5 o'clock this evening for the five strings qualifying round of the men's open singles title thing, a feature of the Hearst-Wallace Randolph Hearst candlepin tourney which, conducted under the auspices of the Boston Record American Sunday Advertiser, winds up in blazing fashion tomorrow evening.

The men's open singles is the juicy morsel which for weeks has been on the tongues of the pin fraternity.

Alone to be listed among the missing tonight of the game's bowling greats is Archie McAleary, many times candlepin champion and one of the games immortals.

ALL-STAR FIELD

Walsh, recently returned home from the hospital, is still in the recuperating stage and perforce must pass up the classic.

But Francis Chimunello, New England champion; Paul Poehler, many times champion, Walter "Daisy" Haley, former champion; Joe Grant, Joe Bonigli, Raph Plante, Johnny Tagg, Joe Rubbicca, Frank McDonough, Roy Green, Dan Donovan, Joe Sacco, George McConville, Jack Jaynes, Tracy Sanborn, Frank DeSisto, Nick Faye and scores of others equally known, will toe off at the one time in this singles elimination series which winds up tomorrow night in the tourney grand finale.

The event is held on an elimination basis, with the opening field cut in halves, the top half continuing on through a second series of five strings tonight and the low half again battling it out tomorrow for the champion ship.

The women's open singles field, smaller in numbers, will have their contention tomorrow night at 5 o'clock, just the one five strings issue

The first five strings in the men's open singles will count in the disposition of the men's open all-events prize and championship, the five strings total will be added to the sum total of the five strings rolled in the doubles and the five strings in team competition, making 13 strings in all Mixed doubles will not figure in the all-events title.

All open singles alleys will be all-day draw.

NEW MIXED RECORD

In the meanwhile further records were registered before the close of the 11th of the 13 days competition.

Foremost was the new open mixed doubles high of 1043 rolled by Walter "Daisy" Haley of Malden and Louise Hamilton of Jamaica Plain, a pair of champions who have left their record imprints in alleys the East over.

Haley, last year's American-Advertiser all-events champion and winner of the Governor Hurley Trophy, and possessor of titles far too numerous to mention, had his far famed speed ball working with a remarkable precision and picked the maples off to the tune of 573, with strings of 129-110-94 127 123.

Miss Hamilton's card read; 90 96-90-100-94 470.

A pair of young married women came through to take the leader ship in the women's amateur doubles field with a mark of 590.

Mrs. Margaret King, a member of the Frank DeSisto Five Alleys of Roxbury, which leads in the team competition, hit 100-85-99—284, while Mrs. Florence Young of Revere, leader in the Ionic League during the past season, connected for 112-93-105-306

Prominent on the day's honor roll was the 337 turned in by Charles Harrington of Portland, Maine bowling as anchor man on the John Naples team of Portland which, with his single total of 377 and his doubles total of 376, gives him a grand total of 1080 pins in his battle for amateur all-events honors.

One succession of breaks prevented Major Henry Burridge Tucker of the Back Bay and his partner, Mrs. Helen Locke of Charlestown, the former Helen Magee of Lowell, from cracking the open mixed doubles mark.

Tucker, handsome veteran of the game, and an admitted artist with his candlepins, put together strings of 99—124—109—126—98 for a total of 556.

Mrs. Locke, who, as Miss Magee traveled the bowling circuit as champion all the way from Wash ington to Maine, was making her first start in three years and a comeback after a long illness which left her off the alleys.

She teamed well with the Major for strings of 93—114—98—83—462, a telling performance, which landed this all-star team with a 1038 pinfall, just five off the record pace.

Highest three strings of the tourney to date were turned in by W Titcomb, who, as a member of the Symonds Brothers Five of Amesbury, rolled 136—120—133—377 one pin better than the 376 previously produced by Harrington of Portland

Knowles Beaten By Dunlap

PINEHURST, N. C., April 8 (INS)—Still shooting the red hot brand of golf he displayed in earlier rounds, Charles Clare, New Haven, Conn., moved into the semi-final round of the North-South amateur golf tourney.

Clare put Pat Mucci, Newark N. J., out of the running with a 3 and 1 victory. Previous victims of Clare's skill included Bobby Dunlsberger, High Point, N. C., the defending champion.

Other semi-finalists are Georgs T. Dunlap, former national champion and five times holder of the North-South title, who defeated Robert W. Knowles, Boston, 3 and 1; Frank Strafaci, New York, the medalist this year, who beat Richard D. Chapman, Greenwich, Conn., 6 and 3, and Morton McCarthy, Norfolk, Va., easy 5 and 4 winner over Hobb Anderson, Wilson, N. C.

Dempsey Wilting From Terrific Pace He's Setting

NEW YORK, April 8 (AP)—Jack Dempsey fast is becoming a very rich man. He quit the ring with over $2,000,000 in cash and quick assets, and he's worth a lot more than that now.

But he's beginning to look tired a little and the years and his friends are beginning to wonder how long the fistic ex can maintain the terrific pace he's setting.

Recently a magazine writer wanted to go a few rounds at a day with Jack Dempsey. It took him three days to do the route. Jack had a rare moment and the writer extricated himself with a handful of jelly beans and a few never-get-a-chance-to-work-out-any-more.

He was asked why he didn't cut down or at least slow the tempo a little to have some fun for himself. He admired he and his comely wife, the former Hannah Williams had been out by themselves only once evening in the last two years.

PLANS FOR RAINY DAY

"I can't," he said. "These are tough times and a guy's got to keep punching. I've got to protect my investments. Take this restaurant. We've got $800,000 sunk in it, more than half of that is mine. We've got to do $1800 worth of business a day to break even."

And the restaurant is only one of Jack's interests. He also has a new bar a block away and he figures he must spend several hours a day there showing most bards. He owns part in Los Angeles Art Mona girl he has a piece of the Agua Caliente race track. There's a new Jack Dempsey necktie and a Jack Dempsey magazine and he's rumored a producing colonel at Gable Ware, Texas.

He's engaged in less than five hours a week at actual work in any of these. Almost every day One and a morning or two age of his face down during the week and punches on the mitts in the ring keeps him in shape.

REMARKABLE MEMORY

Jack has a remarkable memory for names and faces that he has an awful time with some of the 500 daily handshakers Tex some from every part of the country and most of them profess to have met him before Jack maybe so, then, but he never gets a man down who is intent upon impressing the other members of his party.

"Sure, I know 'em all," Jack grinned. "It's part of my business. But you would be surprised how many of these guys from out of town get to arguing and either want to fight or tell me how to run this restaurant. I've been challenged plenty of times, but they can't make me fight."

The first thing the average hand shaker asks Dempsey is what he broke about that famous "long count" in his second bout with Gene Tunney at Chicago. Jack all he has Tunney would have been a set count if he had managed to regain his feet 10 seconds after he hit the floor.

"That's an idea," Jack said to his right-hand man, Ned Brown. "Get Gene to write us a piece about that for the next edition of my magazine. Then I'll answer it. Also, see if you can get hold of this George Hackenschmidt, the old wrestler, for a piece. They tell me he's plenty smart."

With that he was off on another round of the tables moving fast on the balls of his feet but leaving tired around the eyes

Paul Dean Has Faith In Old Soupbone

HOUSTON Tex., April 8 (AP)—Paul Dean, who they say is through in the majors came here today to work in the warm sunshine of the Texas League, where they play most of their baseball at night.

"I'm not through," Paul said as he reported. Paul showed no mite interest as the rawest rookie of the lot of 40 on the ball in any last Florida workout and if I have that much stuff throughout the season I think I can win."he said.

Canadiens 3, Wings 2

SYDNEY, N. S., April 8—Les Canadiens defeated Detroit Red Wings, 3-2, as the teams opened an exhibition game tour of Nova Scotia. Paul Haynes scored all of the winning goals. The teams sail from Halifax Sunday for a tour of Europe.

Leonard Danced With Gang Girl To Save Purse

By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK, April 8—Benny Leonard, the only former boxing champion, is 42 years old today.

But though he has reached an age which makes him a legitimate old timer, the retired lightweight champion has none of the contempt that former sports figures seem to generate for the game that made them.

"I'm getting so old that even Lew Tendler would last six rounds with me," Benjamin beamed tonight. "But I'm not old enough to sneer at the modern fighters, and never will be.

"I think Henry Armstrong's one of the best fighters that ever lived, and that Joe Louis can hit harder than Jack Dempsey ever could. Louis is the only one punch knockout I've ever seen.

"I guess the usual thing for an old bloke to do is to take a few digs at the game, and try to stir up a little sympathy for himself. Well, I just can't manage that.

"Boxing gave me more than I ever gave boxing. It gave me friends, an education, a chance to meet people I never would have known. And it gave me dough."

FIRST FIGHT AT ELEVEN

Thirty-one years ago today Leonard had his first formal fight. It was his 11th birthday he fought a kid named Joe Fogarty, in an East Side backyard.

It was one of those neighborhood grudge battles and on hands pulled Leonard through the old familiar region that a lot of scents was taken up at the gate a mascot at a fence. Benny won and took a purse of 20 cents.

The only thing, he begrudges the modern fighter is the ease with which he collects the money for a fight.

"Listen. When I was fighting, particularly in the early days, it wasn't whether I'd win the fight that bothered me, but whether I'd get paid, and if I did get paid, whether I'd get out of the house with the sugar, alive.

"Many a time Gilhooley and I stood around in a darkened fight club, with our knees knocking, while the promoter counted the house out in 'ones' and a couple of muggs waited outside for us.

"We used to carry the bills we wrapped in newspapers. Sometimes we'd split it three ways, with my brother carrying a paper full of currency—in case one of us got tapped.

"After I fought Pal Moran in East Chicago, Gilhooley and detective Mike Grady and I rode back to the hotel with the money in the trunk of the cab, and all of us with a gun on our knees."

TOUGHTEST SPOT ON COAST

"I guess the toughest spot I was ever in was when I fought a big kid named Dave Shellhammer, in Sacramento in 1919. It was a dinky little fight club, next to a roaring saloon.

"My brother Charley was on the gate, with two cops, but those lousy fans from the Barbary coast just walked by 'em without a ticket, and dared 'em to do something about it.

"Anyway, the Kaye Leonard was a rough kid, and a big favorite. All his pals were so close to the ring they were leaning on the edge of the mat. And in the third round one of them grabs my ankle, and it felt like I was in a bear trap.

"I tried to kick myself away, but he held on, and Kaye came over, bopped me on the chin and I went down.

"It was a lucky knockdown, because I hit the floor so hard that it broke that guy's grip on my ankle. Well, I got up, staved in the middle of the ring after that, and knocked Kaye out in the fourth.

CROWD DISPLEASED

"It didn't sit very well with the crowd, and it looked as if we'd have some trouble trying to get out of the dive, so Gilhon helped me dress and led me by the arm into the big saloon.

Everything seemed to stop when we stepped up to the bar. All those toughs just leaned against it and looked at us, surly like.

Gilh tossed down a hundred dollar bill and said, "Set 'em up for the house," to the bartender. But the toughest looking mug of them all, with a gun lump in his pocket, walked up, picked up the bill and punched it back in Gilhooley's pocket.

"Gilh swallowed a couple of times and finally broke the silence by saying, 'Well, then, what can I do for you boys?'

"The guy looked right at him and said, 'Leave Benny dance with my girl.'"

La Ronde, McFadden, Kelley on Nine

A prospectus of the first string ball club working out under Frank McCrehan at the Boston College Heights would have one believe that Leander MacDonald, former Cambridge Latin school coach was running a farm for the Eagles.

John "Muggsy" Kelley ace south paw, is a MacDonald prod gy.

"Muggsy" had a great year on the Cape last summer and has rounded into top shape at this early date.

The outfield will also boast of an ex-Cambridge Latinite in Ollie LaRonde, hard hitting center fielder. LaRonde was a three-letter man during his four years at the Latin school, and played football at the Heights until injured in spring practice two years ago.

So powerful is LaRonde's hitting that McCrehan intends to keep him way up in the first half of the batting list. LaRonde is also one of the smoothest fielders at the Heights.

In the infield there will be a MacDonald trained youngster in the person of Bill McFadden, who can play most any post in the diamond.

Bill broke in as a first sacker but the large array of excellent material battling for the initial sack, led McCrehan to shift him over to the hot corner.

McFadden has been looking classy around the third sack, and his hitting is definitely on the upgrade as Tommie Paumbo, holder of the sack thus far will have a stiff battle on his hands.

Even if McFadden does drop out of the running for the third sack post, which is a rather slim possibility, McCrehan will keep him on hand as a pinch hitter.

One More for Vines

CHICAGO, April 8 (INS)—Ellsworth Vines defeated Fred Perry here tonight in the 31st match of their current professional tennis tour. The score was 6-3, 6-3. Vines has won 29 matches to date, as against 22 wins by Perry.

Huffman Released

ST. LOUIS, April 8—Benny Huffman has been optioned to Baltimore of the International League by the St. Louis Browns. This leaves the team with only two catchers, Billy Sullivan and Tommy Heath.

Grimes Picks Club To Finish Seventh

CLEARWATER, Fla., April 8 (AP)—Burleigh Grimes manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers surprised baseball writers today by picking his own team to finish no better than seventh in the coming National League race.

Perhaps with tongue in cheek, Burleigh picked the Dodgers to finish behind the Chicago Cubs, St. Louis Cardinals, New York Giants, Pittsburgh Pirates, Cincinnati Reds and Boston Bees, in that order. He said he thought the Dodgers would beat out only the Phillies.

Jockey Adams Brings 6 Long Shots Home

SAN MATEO Cal., April 8 (AP)—Johnny Adams feat of hooting in six straight winners five of them long shots, at Bay Meadows track was listed today as one of the greatest records in American racing history.

The pudgy little jockey from Iola, Kan.—the leading rider last year with 260 winners—started his parade in the third race yesterday with Miss Amie, which paid $19.80.

He then piloted In Danke Schon at $10, Rock N ri 'Em, Dr. Spoon $16, Nonsweep, $16.80 and Undulate, $5.60.

MADE $160 FOR DAY

Adams picked up $160 for his days work—$25 for each winner and $10 for bringing Strident in third in the first race.

His feat was just one short of the American record set by Joe Sylvester at Ravenna, Ohio, in 1930.

Six other riders have ridden six winners in a day. Among twice has brought home five himself.

The daring, barrel-chested little jockey began riding three years ago despite warnings of track experts that he didn't know how. He lived in an auto trailer last year while touring the coast tracks and leading every meet, including Santa Anita.

LEADING RIDER

His six victories yesterday made him the leading rider for the first 15 days of the Bay Meadows meet with 22. Alan Gray has 20.

Other jockeys to ride six victories in a day were Monk Overton at Washington Park in 1891; James Lee at Churchill Downs in 1907; Clarence Turner at Charleston S. C., in 1912; H. Phillips at Reno Nev., in 1926; Earl Sande at Havre de Grace in 1919 and Albert Adams at Montreal in 1930.

Clark Favored To Beat Samari In Garden Bout

Scot Fared Better With Casey Than Did Rival

George (Dazzler) Clark, former Dundee (Scotland) policeman, rates a very slight favorite over Seelie Samar, colored gentleman from Algeria, in the headline wrestling bout at the Garden tonight.

A comparison of records of both Clark and Samari, both of whom have engaged Steve (Crusher) Casey, world's heavyweight champion, is what makes the Scotchman a bit o'z choice.

Clark earned Casey several minutes beyond the one-hour mark and even managed to the Crusher until the very last minute of their warfare.

Billy Raroush, Wee Willie Davis, Tor Johnson, Hans Steinke and Richard Krahl, outclassing each, fell prey to Casey's devasting holds and was beaten in straight falls in less than 26 minutes.

But Samari appears the more powerful. He is constructed along lines of the famous Brooklyn Bridge, and there are those among the fans who believe the colored fellow's strength will more than offset Clark's superior science and speed.

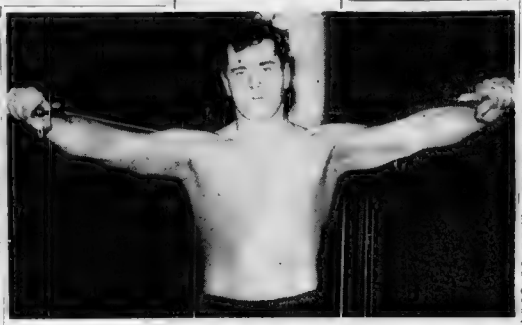
Clark finished training with a fight but splitted dri

"The way I feel now I will beat Samari into so many small pieces," Clark declared after his last workout.

"I will set such a dizzy pace that Samari will quit."

But Samari appears just as confident of victory.

"I am in splendid condition, and I know I will be too rough and strong for the Scotchman. I feel that I am world champion now. I will feel the same way after my bout with Clark."



Cockier than ever, George "Dazzler" Clark, flashy Scotchman, wound up his training session in grand style for his match with Seelie Samari, colored heavyweight grappler, at the Garden tonight. The Scotchman threatens to go back to his native land if he fails to whip Samari.

'I'll Go Home If I Don't Win'

Talented Battery Among Veterans On Lynn C. Nine

Vigneaux-Turkewich Combination Faces Grads Tomorrow

Schoolboy baseball is scheduled to get under way on the North Shore tomorrow afternoon with Coach Bill Joyce's Lynn Classical forsehiders facing a star-studded Alumni nine on the diamond adjoining the new Lynn Stadium.

While this game naturally doesn't carry the significance of a regular season tilt, Coach Joyce does feel it's an excellent opportunity to see his 1938 charges under fire.

With this thought in mind, he's going to start the scuffle with the nine boys who have exhibited the best ball in their respective positions during the past two weeks of practice.

Most of these starters are vet erans, having seen considerable service on last spring's aggregation that was nosed out of the Essex County League championship by the crack Lynn English diamonders.

TURKEWICH CAPTAIN

The battery that was hailed as one of the finest in schoolboy ranks a season ago, Pitcher Bob Vigneaux and Catcher Bernard Turkewich, is back again, and most likely will receive Coach Joyce's nod to open the festivities tomorrow.

Both Vigneaux and Turkewich this year's captain, have been coming up with some grand ball in practice.

While Bob is flipping through a much faster ball than in 1937, he battery mate has improved in backstopping and batting.

Another chap with plenty of hurling class is Earl Swenson. Although he hasn't Vigneaux's experience or speed, he possesses a puzzling curve and a tricky change of pace.

Slated to handle the first base assignment is Joe McNulty, the same gentleman who did so nobly for the Shoe City eleven last fall.

A giant in size and weight, Joe takes the laurels when it comes to selecting the best performer on the '38 outfit.

Already, numerous big league scouts are on his trail. He battered way up around the .400 mark last spring along with playing a nifty game afield.

The remainder of the inner condon should find Bob Cenedella on second, Lew Colleras at third and Ben Dobrow at short.

These lads are veterans and pretty good ball players, offensively and defensively.

TALENT CONTEST

The garden guardians will be Jim Cuzzeo, Joe Flannery and Sam Durgan, another experienced trio.

In addition to these stalwarts, Coach Joyce has a hope of giving about 10 more boys a chance to see action before the game is over.

All this week, the veteran mentor has been conducting "talent contest" games with the juniors and sophomores as competitors.

These tilts are conducting with an eye to discovering outstanding candidates boys who have ability but haven't had a chance to work out with the more experienced varsity group.

Some time next week, Boss Joyce will select an all-star team from these candidates to face the No. 1 club. And any one of the aspirants who shows up real well in this tilt will be immediately placed on the varsity

LYNN ENGLISH TOMORROW

Lynn Classical's Coach, Bill Joyce, is all smiles these days, and the reason is his 1938 baseball team. Loaded down with veteran material, the Shoe City nine is expected to be one of the strongest schoolboy diamond machines in the state.

Boston Evening American Photos

A real all-around athlete is Classical's Joe McNulty. An All-Scholastic back last fall, Joe is now turning his talents to the baseball diamond.

Melrose to Stage Boys' Road Race

The first annual three and a half mile road race for boys between the ages of 15 and 21 will be held by the American Legion Post of Melrose, Tuesday morning April 19.

Entries will close next Friday and may be made with Fred Lacey at the Y. M. C. A., Lester Young of the high school faculty, Father Burke at the J. H. N. C., or at the Legion bungalow, Crystal street.

The Reds did not tie the score at 4 all until the fourth minute of third period play, when Hill, a Boston Bruin irregular, rapped in the equalizer with Drouillard and Lesieur assisting.

Hill also opened the Providence scoring during the fourth minute of the second period, with Drouillard's aid.

The other Providence scorers were Starr and Crawford.

Training Camp Gossip

By the Associated Press

TULSA, Okla., April 8—The New York Yankees nursing a one-game winning streak, something of a record for them this spring, are on hand to meet the Tulsa Oilers of the Texas League with little of the fanfare that accompanied two previous visits. Whether it is the lack of a Babe Ruth or Joe DiMaggio to pack 'em in, or the fact the Yanks are meeting minor league opposition, the world champions are not drawing. They have not had a full house since opening day at St. Petersburg.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla — Jack Wisnett, the lanky Brooklyn Dodger outfielder, has set 35 home runs as a goal for this season. It is quite a goal, Wisnett, but only five in 118 games last year and the entire squad could hit only 32 more

MONROE, La.—With the forfeited game with the Cleveland Indians still the New York Giants' main topic of conversation, writers and the few remaining Gas Hs who served under John McGraw didn't forget him. For as secretary Eddie Brannick put it, "how the old man would have loved to be in on this scrap."

MONROE, La.—Manager Oscar Vitt of the Cleveland Indians announced that Jimmy (Skeeter) Webb, new Cleveland infielder secured when Judge Landis declared him a free agent, would play shortstop against Meridian, Miss., his home town, Saturday.

GREENSBORO, N. C.—Manager Bill McKechnie of the Cincinnati Reds is just about set on his lineup for the opening game of the season. It's the same one he used against the Boston Red Sox Wednesday, with Ival Goodman in the lead-off spot.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas—Manager Gabby Street said today Outfielder Sammy West will be out of the St Louis Browns' lineup temporarily because of a small chipped bone in the second finger of his right hand. Street said Mel Mazzera or Ethan Allen would take West's place in centerfield against the Chicago Cubs today

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—What to do with First Baseman Rip Collins is a growing problem for Manager Grimm of the Chicago Cubs these days. Phil Cavaretta has been drawing the first base assignments but since he can play the outfield too Grimm must decide whether he is good enough to keep Collins on the bench.

ABILENE, Tex.—With Shortstop Lake Appling injured and Pitcher Monty Stratton relegated to the sidelines, Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox said today he was "just hoping for a spot in the first division." He rated the 1938 pennant field in this order: Yankees, Tigers, Indians, White Sox, Red Sox, Senators, Athletics and Browns.

LAKELAND, Fla.—Peter Fox, Detroit outfielder, is happier than usual this spring. He is one of those players who can't hit his weight before mid-season and finally turns up with a better than .300 average. The cause for Fox's rejoicing is a .327 average for the exhibition season, compared with .337 for last year's regular campaign.

ATLANTA, Ga.—The Washington Senators arrived to meet Atlanta of the Southern Association with one of their poorest won-and-lost records in years for their games at and around Orlando, Fla. The Senators won only two games from major league teams and dropped nine straight to opponents from the majors

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Manager Jimmy Wilson, brave man, picks the Phillies to finish fifth in the National League this year. "I have the best pitching of the second division clubs," said Wilson. "Ike Walters, Passeau, Hallahan, Lanaster, Smith and Mulcahy, I have a staff that ought to show them all something."

ABILENE, Tex.—Club President Bill Benswanger of the Pittsburgh Pirates, en route to St Louis with crack right-hander Russ Bauers sent word to Manager Pie Traynor that the swelling in the pitcher's knee is greatly diminished. That, plus yesterday's snow storm, appeared to have cooled the Bucco pilot's temper and he may not, after all, impose fines for the rough-housing that led to Bauer's injury.

DURHAM, N. C.—It's home-comming day for the Duke baseball alumni today as the Philadelphia Athletics meet Duke University next Thursday

Olympics Ready For Raiders

Working steadily at the Providence Auditorium, the Boston Olympics showed themselves to be in tip top shape for their struggles with Sherbrooke's finest, scheduled for the Boston Garden tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon.

The locals were snapping the puck back and forth in better form than they have shown all winter.

True to his word, Coach Hazo Harrington used Jerry-come-lately Desrosiers on the left wing of the Ford-Allen line. In spite of Jerry's right shot, the Cambridge youth proved himself well able to take care of the southpaw slot.

The other big shift in the Bostonians' ranks was Jack Costello's appearance at the defense berth. The Lowell bulldog handled a new position as if he had been working there all his life. He teamed up with the veteran Bill Splaine, who has the knack of steadying a newcomer.

It was Splaine who helped make Jim Roberts the fine workman he is, and Coach Harrington is hoping he will be able to work his miracles with Costello.

Gymnastic Meet At Tech April 16

Entries will close with the chairman of the New England Gymnastic committee, Herbert G. Forsell.

and thousands of members of the fair sex bowl every week in Greater Boston.

The boom in sports is due partly to the interest women display in various forms of athletics. You see the girls at the hockey games, ice carnivals, football battles, wrestling and boxing bouts, race tracks, ball games, and at other athletic events.

The modern American girls doesn't have to have a boy friend for her to take in athletic events. You see groups of girls getting enjoyment and excitement at sports events. They pay for their own tickets, and don't ask favors from anybody.

I would suggest that if you wish to see some top bowling action that you drop in at the Huntington Club tonight or tomorrow.

Jack Stafford's big Hearst bowling party is nearing its close, and the final hours of the tournament should be well worth watching.

Winning Lead Important In Bridge

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

As important as the opening lead is at rubber bridge, it is even more so in duplicate.

At rubber bridge the opening lead is apt to mean the difference between a saved and a lost game. In duplicate, even when the game cannot be saved by any opening, a vital extra trick may still be involved.

Consider the hand shown below which occurred in a match-point duplicate game.

North, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

	♠ KQ73 ♡ KQJ54 ◇ 83 ♣ AQ
♠ A8643 ♡ 10876 ◇ J1097 ♣ —	North West East South	♠ 10 ♡ A ◇ K8642 ♣ J1084
	♠ J95 ♡ 943 ◇ AQ ♣ K9752

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 N T	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

I am quoting the bidding that took place at two different tables, in both cases. It will be noted, East felt that his own vulnerability made a two club or two diamond overcall unduly risky. I cannot say why both of these South players chose to bid one notrump rather than the legitimate response of two clubs, but apparently they had determined to bid one notrump first and from that point East and West did not do at all well. Declarer easily took in ten tricks.

THE BETTER WAY

At the other table, West took a different view of the opening lead. To his mind, although a spade lead seemed to offer a slightly greater chance for the contract's defeat, it was not nearly so safe as a diamond lead. If the spade lead failed to "click" West reasoned, it would almost surely cost one or more tricks. If the diamond lead failed to defeat the contract at least it could hardly cost a trick.

On that basis West selected the Jack of diamonds and unexpected success followed. East put up the king and declarer won A heart was then led toward dummy and the jack was killed with the ace. East returned his own original fourth-best diamond, the four-spot, and declarer won with the queen. At this point West carefully unblocked by following with the nine.

Declarer, after winning with the diamond queen, was quite helpless. He led a spade toward dummy West took his ace cashed the diamond ten and then led the carefully preserved seven-spot. East overtook with the eight and cashed his fifth diamond for the setting trick.

HUMAN INTEREST

A dramatic story attached to the recent appointment by Fire Commissioner William Arthur Reilly of District Chief John Walsh of East Boston . . . The appointment was made because Chief Walsh was No. 1 on the captain's list . . . A story of Chief Walsh appointment is told better than I can reflect could write it in the note at hand from the fire commissioner containing the said:

"I discovered when handling Walsh's appointment," commissioner Reilly writes, "that he had had a son at Boston College high school in 1918, and Chief Walsh told me how much he regretted that various departed members of his family could not share with him the joy of his new appointment. Particularly interesting to me was his mention of his son William who died in 1918, a few days after he played in a football game . . . In 1918, at Boston College high school, Walsh and Arthur Reilly sat side by side, and I remember very clearly the circumstances of Walsh's death . . . Naturally then I was particularly moved to have the honor, 20 years later, of promoting Will Walsh's father. I did not realize that Chief Walsh was the father of my old friend of high school days until after he had been appointed."

One other sentence in the fire commissioner's letter will be of extreme interest to members of the Boston fire department. Here it is: "You can be sure that in my appointments in the future, those on the list will get the chevron time."

FOR THE RECORD

In the loss of John J. Jack, Cremmen, he overlooked mourners one of the truest friends a man ever had . . . so many others are mourning him for the same reason, that it is much more than a personal sense of loss which motivates this meager epitaph . . . With those terms of others—in a thoughtful, generous and inspiring friend, we pray for eternal peace.

Jack Whiting Given Lead In Film

Martha Raye, Betty Grable Also Get Musical Roles

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, April 8—Jack Whiting, youthful husband of the first Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks and young Doug's step-papa, is in Hollywood to start in "Give Me a Sailor," a musical comedy, for Paramount.

He'll make his screen company the redoubtable Martha Raye, Betty Grable and J. C. Nugent.

J. C.'s pop is the director and Jeff Lazarus the producer, while Richard Rosson and Richard Maibaum are the authors.

Whiting is just back from England, where he appeared in Jessie Matthews' production and this is his first picture in Hollywood.

Louella O. Parsons

Picture of some sort was the second better thing that happened to Martha Raye. The first was her appearance with Bob Hope in "Big Broadcast of 1938." What a comedienne she is! Remember her in "Rhythm on the Range" and "Mountain Music"?

I found a happy man today in Lee Wood and with Fields and Bing Crosby and Mack Sennett, I've heard Lee. He is another we all know named Lee. La Rue whose parties have been fun and too good the past year. He is happy because Hal Wallis signed him to play one of the important roles in "Valley of the Giants" with Claire Trevor, Wayne Morris, John Litel and other Warner players.

Jack takes the part which Humphrey Bogart had expected to do but which has been voted against because Humphrey isn't twins and can't do more than one movie at a time. Charles Bickford, charming screen villainy honors with Jack, was also signed today.

Joan Crawford draws Nelson Eddy in a movie very, very soon. All hands at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are scrambling around to find a musicale for Joan. Crawford, who really surprised everyone by singing, and singing is what we mean. Maybe it will be "The Chocolate Soldier," "Sweethearts," or "Show Boat," or one of the many musicale plays M-G-M has on hand. Jeanette MacDonald, of course, won't be neglected in the matter of musicals.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Sam NEWMAN, he is the GOLDWYN musical director have separated; TERRY HUNT trainer of many of our most important stars and ELAINE SHEPHERD, pretty stock actress, have been wed and will marry a week from Saturday; LESLIE PETERSON of M-G-M and FLEANOR STEWART, another pretty young player, are admitting matrimonial plans . . . FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW, guest of honor at the Barnes-Sells Bowe circus, rode the biggest elephant in the parade; SIGRID GURIE came back with a sore throat and can't talk. Maybe it's just as well. That's all for today.

Colbert Hit On Twin Bills

The Lubitsch-touched "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" starring Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper, which delighted Met audiences last month is now being shown on the Paramount and Fenway screens . . . Adapted from Alfred Savoir's Continental hit play, "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" is a happy pairing of Europe's most glamorous pleasure-seekers.

Notable highspots are the two-times department-store battle over a pair of pyjamas when they fight in love at first sight; the interlude when Gary takes Claudette across the knees and administers a spanking where the sun never shines and that final indignity when Colbert leads Bedroom Comedy Constructor Lubitsch before making love to him.

The two are supported by a fine cast, including Edward Everett Horton, David Niven, Elizabeth Patterson, Herman Bing and Franklin Pangborn.

By PEGGY DOYLE

Hollywood's swankiest florists charged Paramount approximately $25,000 for the synthetic jungle in which Gaga leaps from limb to limb of Palm Canyon's 2000-year-old palm trees in "Her Jungle Love."

That incomparable sarong-wearer Dorothy Lamour, and Ray Milland, are co-starred in this George Archainbaud directed Technicolor spree now showing at the Metropolitan Theater. These two hard working troupers, as we have just pointed out are the co-stars, according to the billing.

But Mrs. Gaga over whom the audience goes gaga (excuse it, please, but "Her Jungle Love" will have you doing the same things, it is that understanding on the mental equipment).

Gaga, played to the hilt by Hollywood's celebrated Jiggs, the chimpanzee, Meeka, a spunky tiger-cub and Jiggs' 13-year-old screen playmate and Lynne Overman, of the hoarse voice and the dry humor, are our favorite scene stealers in "Her Jungle Love." There are also some treacherous-looking crocodiles with all their teeth. They are so frightfully ferocious you'll probably be too scared to watch them.

Milland and stout Overman, aviators, are searching for a lost flyer when they are grounded in lush island jungle. They make the acquaintance of a beautiful girl who's musical gibberish, luggage-tan epidermis and revealing sarong suggest to them that she is a native.

Entre nous, my pets, she is the daughter of white parents. She had been kidnaped in infancy by Kusaa, English-speaking ruler of a neighboring island and white man hater. It is his unpleasant little custom to feed any white man he encounters to crocodiles during which ceremonies Lamour presides as the crocodile queen. The evil Kusaa (Jonathan Hale) covets her for his own.

Love in the person of that nice young Englishman, Ray Milland, rescues her from this murky existence. Dorothy Howe, who saw Milland first, does her worst (well, very little, really) to out-sarong Lamour but the saronged-gal wins out.

Pretty rountine, yes? Overman's wisecracks, which gain in his telling, are the brightest contributions to the one, to say nothing of Gaga and Meeka.

"Condemned Women," stark and chilling, features Sally Eilers, Lola Hayward and Anne Shirley. It is all about women convicts who murder each other, hardly a pre-Easter theme. Why RKO Radio should afflict us with the distaff angle on the grimmer side of life after the men-in-prison formula has already been worked to death is one of those mysteries only a Hollywood producer could solve.

Except for the warden George Miller, and the prison psychologist Louis Hayward, the cast is feminine.

Miss Eilers wronged by the law is redeemed through Hayward's love. She is thoroughly convincing. Ann Shirley is much less effective as the girl who is punished for a crime she did not commit. The other women in the cast particularly Lee Patrick, are hard cold, tough, but strangely enough faultlessly wormwise-waved as is Dorothy Lamour on a neighboring screen in "Her Jungle Love."

The morbid may be attracted to this picture which, it seems to us has a very limited appeal if any.

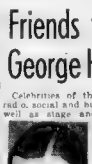
Friends to Fete George Holland



George Holland

Celebrities of the stage, screen radio, vaudeville and business and well as stage and city officials, have signified their intention to be present Tuesday evening, May 24, at the "Friendship Dinner" to be given George Holland, Boston American drama critic and columnist at the Copley-Plaza.

The affair is planned as a "welcome home" to Mr. Holland who is now almost completely recovered from the accident he suffered more than a year ago.

The committee in charge is made up of several hundred friends of Mr. Holland. They are arranging for an evening of many surprises, including music and entertainment furnished from leading New York and local theaters and night clubs. Joseph M. Brennan, executive secretary of the Allied Theaters, is serving as general chairman.

Ebb-Tide' Tops New Gayety Bill

"Ebb-Tide," with Oscar Homolka, Frances Farmer, Ray Milland and Barry Fitzgerald, continues at the New Gayety Theater today and tomorrow. This excellent drama of the South Seas is filmed in Technicolor. Another excellent production, "Mr. Deeds Goes To Town," co-starring Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur, is the companion picture.

Midnight Show At Old Howard

The Old Howard's midnight show, starting at 11:30 tonight, features Kiki Roberts, former Ziegfeld follies beauty; Dorothy Hyatt, dancer; Bob Carney, Happy Hyatt, Billy Fields, Jean Carter, Joan Lance, Muriel Reed, Connie Evans, Gordan Sisters and Nanette Le-Brun.

Robinson Film At the Olympia

Stays at Keith's

Jane Pickens, who has been held over for a second week as the star of the stage show at the Keith Memorial.

Buck, Bubbles Star on Stage At Boston

It requires all the Ha'lem ebullience of Buck and Bubbles and their lively mahogany-skinned troupe to win you to light-hearted-ness after viewing "Condemned Women" at the RKO-Boston this week.

The rhythmic B and B, long favorites here and in every other city in which they have appeared apparently have never heard of the recession or the "Dictator" bill. Utterly carefree and completely competent, they cavort about the K-B stage with matchless skill, indulging the while in their lazily enunciated but brilliantly conceived dialogue.

Dot and Dash, song stylists, are easy on the ears. We can't go quite that far about Alice Harris Jigsaw Jackson, on the other hand is a cinch to get enthusiastic about with his magical contortions. The Swing-Kids, boys and girls, are tireless and talented dancers.

De Cou Gives Three Talks

'Normandy-Brittany' Topic of Two

"Normandy and Brittany," second in the series of Branson De Cou lectures, will be given at 8:15 o'clock the evening at Tremont Temple. The same lecture will be repeated tomorrow afternoon at 2:15.

Interesting scenes to be shown include the famous Rose Gardens Norman farmhouses Gothic magnificence and scenes of the people in their quaint costumes and hair-dresses, village life, sardine and tuna fisheries, lace-making, shrines and many other celebrated native pictures. An extra picture by Mrs. De Cou is announced for tomorrow evening at 8:15.

It's Deanna Again at Keith's

The glamour girls of Hollywood might well raise a pencilled eyebrow as they note the public reaction—and the box-office response—to all three of Deanna Durbin's pictures, the latest of which, "Mad About Music," is being held over for another week at the Keith-Memorial Theater.

Deanna, a lovely child with a beautiful voice, is at what used to be known as the "awkward age." Movie children were traditionally doomed to oblivion when they had outgrown the tiny tot stage, and rarely made a comeback.

But when this normal, unaffected young miss appeared in "Three Smart Girls," and made an even bigger hit in "One Hundred Men and a Girl," this tradition was knocked on the head.

Increasingly large audiences have expressed their delight with this very real child, and with the excellence of acting and directing in "Mad About Music," without which, incidentally, the story might have been banal.

The story is that of a normal imaginative little girl in a Swiss boarding school, torn between loyalty to her screen-star mother, who "mustn't have a 14-year-old daughter," and the adolescent desire to confess.

Hence, since all her classmates brag about their parents' accomplishments, and she must keep silent about her famous widowed mother, she invents an explorer father. When she is "put on the spot" by a jealous schoolmate, she picks Herbert Marshall off a train—a very nice pick-up indeed—and presents him as her father.

With the assistance of an unwilling caretaker, splendidly played by Christian Rub, she kidnaps Herbert and his gentleman's gentleman Arthur Treacher, and gathers them in the bachelor Mr. Marshall has acknowledged his daughter before a whole school.

Gail Patrick, who plays the actress-mother, claims her child publicly in the end, and the new family arrangement seems satisfactory to all concerned.

With the picture, the Keith-Memorial management also holds over Jane Pickens whose lovely radio voice proves to be even lovelier in the theater and who is as pleasing to the eye as to the ear.

Premiere Is Set for Holiday

Dwight Deere Wiman has pushed back the Shubert Theater opening of the new Rodgers and Hart musical "I Married An Angel" to Tuesday, April 19 to provide extra days to allow two full days for dress rehearsals and for scenic trim of the show.

At the same time it was announced first-nighters opportunity to attend two openings Easter Week, with the "The Women" and Boothe's new comedy at the Cosmo and The Mask Head Cafe romance-in-reverse, that had run successfully in Paris at the Wilbur.

Dennis King and Vera Zorina will be starred in the operetta "I Married An Angel," which is scheduled for four performances in New Haven preceding the Boston premiere. The two additional days of rehearsal in Boston plus the New Haven engagement and repeated visits by Mr. Wiman to view the show in various stages of progress will permit the cast and production to perfect the show to a point of smoothness that will insure success when it reaches Broadway.

The show will open from stage training a good deal earlier than is customarily decreed for tryouts, thus doing away with the necessity for "breaking in" the show after the opening. Mr. Wiman believes that he will be well on with the rehearsals when the opening night arrives, thus avoiding the usual last minute jitters of the stage.

ELSIE ROBINSON writes from the woman's viewpoint, discusses everyday affairs and problems, regularly in the Boston American.

Whitney Tells SEC Of Deals

Borrowed Half a Million From Brother George in 1929

NEW YORK, April 8 (INS)—Richard Whitney, indicted head of the crashed firm of Richard Whitney & Co., admitted today before Security and Exchange Commission trial examiner, Samuel O. Clark, Jr., that in addition to his own seat on the exchange he owned and controlled an interest in a second, belonging to Henry D. Margatt. The money which enabled Mygatt to buy the seat, $486,000, was borrowed in 1929 from Whitney's brother, George Whitney, of the house of Morgan.

At that time Whitney borrowed half a million from his brother.

It was apparent from the line of the questioning by Gerhard Gessell, SEC counsel, that the commission was interested in the extent of participation of the great Morgan house in the Richard Whitney firm.

Gessell went into the original structure of the Whitney firm and showed a strange lack of personal capital on the part of anyone as a partner of the firm. Richard Whitney contributed one seat, as did Whitney. Whitney had some $200,000 of capital, some of which he borrowed. He said he borrowed some from his uncle, Edward F. Whitney, and was vague as to his other sources.

He looked tired and showed the effects of the strain in a constant blinking of his eyelids.

Whitney's desperate attempt to save himself and his firm was brought out in the list of his friends from whom he borrowed securities for the purpose of securing cash loans on the securities. He borrowed securities from Dennany Kuntz, W. Deering Howe, Allan L. Carey, George Whitney, his brother, Gertrude Whitney, his wife, Donald Getty and Roland Redmond. The total borrowing value of these securities was over half a million dollars. All of these were personal unsecured loans, and only a few of these securities have been returned today.

U. S. Guarantee Of Rail Bonds Opposed

WASHINGTON, April 8 (INS)—President Roosevelt today frowned on proposals that the federal government guarantee railroad bonds after individual carriers have gone through reorganization proceedings.

Why? he countered at his press conference, when asked about it. How about cotton companies, telegraph companies, automobile plants and steel companies that might be coming out of reorganization, the President asked.

Generally speaking, Mr. Roosevelt pointed out, it is the general practice to appraise bondholdings at market value. He made an exception in the case of such a great emergency as existed in 1930-35, when the insurance commissioners of the various states agreed to permit bookkeeping on a basis of actual values because obviously the market values at that time were below actual values.

Mr. Roosevelt said he still was working on the railroad message to Congress with information coming in from a number of quarters. John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, is returning to the White House this afternoon for the second time in 24 hours to supply data.

Carloadings Off 49,463 Cars

WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—The Association of American Railroads reported today 523,489 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 49,463 cars, or 8.6 per cent, compared with the preceding week; a decrease of 197,040, or 27.4 per cent, compared with a year ago, and a decrease of 361,835, or 40.9 per cent, compared with 1930.

Reveals How People Today Are Thinking

Groundswell Setting In Towards Sanity, Says B. C. Forbes

By B. C. FORBES

This column does not, aspire merely to present the views of the writer but to give insight into developments in trade, industry finance, to reveal the fruits of intimate contacts with highest leaders, workers, etc., to provide a vehicle for all ranks and conditions to have their say on subjects affecting their economic well-being.

How the pendulum is swinging is of direct concern alike to employers and employes, manufacturers and merchants, investors and consumers, to say nothing of lawmakers and those who elect or reject candidates for public office, tax-leviers and taxpayers.

My own opinion is that a veritable groundswell is setting in towards common sense, toward sanity, towards Americanism, that "isms" imported from dictatorial nations are losing appeal, that more and more people now recognize that genuine progress cannot be achieved and maintained unless employment-givers, industry and business be given reasonable opportunity to function, be given reasonable inducement to incur risks, be given reasonable opportunity to reap the rewards of success.

All this is preliminary to quoting communications from readers. Not one of every hundred received can be given, only a few of typical type.

From a veteran retail store employe:

"The factory in our town normally employs 400-500 people. There are now about 60 people working on part-time only. Imagine what my employer is up against. Business is cut to the bone—so is my pay envelope. I am working now for less than I have for 20 years. What light can you throw on this poor picture of conditions?"

* * *

From a building worker:

"I am just a house carpenter—rate a skilled workman's pay. At our home records of wages and days worked have been kept for a good many years. Consequently, I know to a dollar what I earned whist those Mr. Roosevelt terms 'the selfish interests' were running this country, and what I earned since he has taken such an interest in the lower classes. The comparison certainly is not favorable to F. D. R. For the past four years my income has been getting lower in spite of my wage-scale union-rate having nearly doubled.

"I cannot but conclude that if my wage rate is so high that people won't employ me and give me low-workmen, than this ballyhoo about raising wages is just bunk."

* * *

From another reader, 60 years old, whose money represents my life's savings":

"I considered you unduly critical of the administration, but I have changed my mind. Everything I own has dropped at least 50 per cent—some worthless. And the same condition applies to millions, how can the administration expect those people to spend purchases so that other people might be employed? How many automobiles could I have purchased with $30,000—which represents my pauper loss? How many houses could I have built? In this distributing wealth or making it disappear in the air?"

* * *

The following is submitted as summarizing the average monthly payrolls of all manufacturing industries in the United States during the full terms of the last four presidents.

Monthly Payroll	Under President	Monthly Empl'y't
$179,867,000	Harding	7,869,853
207,629,000	Coolidge	8,419,750
158,487,000	Hoover	7,093,250

In view of conditions today, isn't current dissatisfaction understandable?

'Doping' of China Laid to Japs

NEW YORK, April 8 (INS) — Use of narcotics by Japan as an instrument of national policy to weaken the Chinese race is revealed by Frank C. Waldrop, in an article entitled, "Public Enemy No. 3—Dope," in the May issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine, out today.

Waldrop reveals that as the Japanese war machine ploughs through China, an increase in opium poppy production is noted. And morphine factories are established immediately in the conquered areas.

"This industry [narcotic]," writes Waldrop, "has spread its tentacles through the Far East, and has direct connections with the narcotic rings in Europe and America. The United States is the big money market, and the objective of every drug syndicate."

In another Cosmopolitan article, Major Garland Williams, New York district supervisor of the narcotics bureau, said a drive against marijana cigarettes is expected in the smashing of a highly-organized "Spanish ring."

St. Louis Exchange Elects New Head

ST. LOUIS, April 8 (INS)—J. Gales Williams, partner in the firm of Francis Bro & Co., today was elected president of the St. Louis Stock Exchange to succeed Walter F. Jacobs. William H. Burg was chosen vice-president and William M. Lauderman, treasurer.

Retail Sales Up Despite Weather

Show 2 to 5 Per Cent Gain Above Last Week; Wholesale Orders Increase

NEW YORK, April 8 (AP)—Hit by wintry cold and snow, retail buying at leading centers of distribution this week didn't spiral with accustomed pre-Easter velocity, but sales despite the weather handicap ran 2 to 5 per cent above last week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. Dollar volume averaged 4 to 15 per cent under the like week last year.

Wholesale orders were 3 to 10 per cent above last week, although 15 to 20 per cent under a year ago.

LACK VIGOR

"Easter preparations were not pursued with their expected vigor, as consumers were forced by unseasonable weather to defer shopping plans," said the credit agency.

"The little improvement which retailers recorded was provided by men's and women's apparel. Some of the women's wear stores nearly reached their volume for the corresponding 1937 period. Millinery, handbags, fur capes, gloves, belts and other dress accessories moved particularly well.

"Both men's and boys' clothing sold well, with emphasis on the latter. The call for sporting goods increased.

"Interest almost was absent in furniture, refrigerators, electrical goods and radios. Sales of luxury items were less brisk than at the beginning of March.

Regarding wholesale trade, the agency added:

INVENTORIES REDUCED

"Brightest aspect of the wholesale situation was the progressive inventory reduction reported by retailers throughout the country. This was indicated by the number of recorders for both staple and seasonable merchandise.

"Even dry goods made a better showing, dress fabrics were in stronger demand, and calls for some types of full-fashioned hosiery ran ahead of deliveries from mills. Replacement requests for women's spring coats were undiminished."

Cotton Mart to Close

NEW YORK, April 8 (INS)—New York Cotton Exchange will be closed Good Friday, April 15, and the following Saturday, it was announced today.

Public Income 7 Per Cent Over 1936

NEW YORK, April 8 (AP)—Based on national income the average American had $555 of money to spend in 1937 and the average family unit about $2392, the magazine Sales Management estimated in a survey of the nation's buying power.

It was calculated the American public had an "effective buying income" of $71,525,065,000, a boost of 7 per cent over the $41,760,000,000 of 1932 and 7 per cent over the $67,000,000,000 of 1936.

This national income, the magazine said, ranked fourth highest in the nation's history. It was described as the "money actually paid out during the year for goods and services produced and rendered, plus federal allowances and monies paid out of the savings and surpluses of business institutions, and adjusted by applying information about living costs, such as the non-money income received by farmers in the form of free rent and produce consumed on the farm."

The District of Columbia, the magazine reported, led the nation with a per family income of $3786 followed by New York's $3401. The Connecticut figure was $3160, Massachusetts, $3089, and Rhode Island $2962. Michigan and California were tied at $2898.

Boston Exchange To Expand Trading

SEC Asked to Approve Listing of Sixteen N. Y. Issues

WASHINGTON, April 8 (INS)—A fight to obtain full lot trading privileges in 16 securities now on the New York Stock Exchange and the New York Curb Exchange has been opened here by the Boston Stock Exchange before the securities and exchange commission. Unlisted trading privileges are sought in one curb issue and 15 stock exchange issues.

The governing committee of the Boston exchange has placed in the record of the hearing before Charles S. Moore, examiner for the commission, rules adopted by the governing committee for changing the present system of round-lot trading on most Boston odd-lot ordinary market conditions required by the commission.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 8 (INS) Merger of the San Francisco Curb and San Francisco Stock Exchange is expected in three weeks, following approval voted by curb members yesterday. The exchange members voted for the merger 10 days ago.

A REPORTER At the PAPAL COURT

By THOMAS B. MORGAN

Thomas B. Morgan tells of the fortitude of Pope Pius XI, who continued his arduous daily program despite pains which kept him in constant agony.

CHAPTER 34

Pius XI had never known illness until he approached his eightieth year. His long life was charmed with buoyant health. He had always been healthy, had never called a doctor. This extreme fortune had created in him a conviction that he could never be ill.

His motto of "mens sana in corpore suno," faithfully practiced, not only had made him sick-proof, but had evolved in him a mental intolerance of pain.

When the afflictions of old age finally began to molest him, he tried to ignore their existence and continued to keep the mental suggestion of their presence. Denying pain to himself, he naturally denied all his ailments to his intimate collaborators.

Among his innovations he enunciated almost to the point of dogma the dictum that the Pope must not be ill. He abolished the corps of papal physicians and never appointed even one doctor. No Pope had been without this corps. Archiatro papali was an appointment sought b, any ambitious physician.

"The Pope must be well," Pius XI proclaimed whenever it was suggested to be a doctor see him. "The Pope must always be well even if he does not feel well himself."

He had successfully resisted the unremitting daily toll of the advancing years of 1925 and 1935. Every one of the Vatican prelates presaged his collapse especially in the latter year. Some had tried to persuade him to relax his relentless avidity for work.

DISDAINS ILLNESS

They were scolded and in no unmistakable terms were told to mind their own business. He had a genuine repugnance about quitting and an abhorrent disdain for any personal shortcomings, physical or mental.

When he spent the summer of 1936 in Castelgandolfo, not alone did many of the Vatican notice that he appeared very tired, but practically everyone saw the sure signs of an illness that threatened.

The Pope of eternal youth and alert spirit, who had never consented to any relaxation of routine for himself, was beginning to manifest slackened mental spring. The indefatigable was undoubtedly due to a tired body.

Cardinal Salotti, sitting in audience and having worried for days with which the Pontiff talked, ventured to approach the subject of his health with delicate tact of a Vatican diplomat.

"You have been an example for all men, Holy Father," said the cardinal. "No man works harder than Your Holiness for God and His church."

"The Pope is called to work," proclaimed the slow but authoritative voice of Pius XI, "and God will take care of him."

It was difficult for the cardinal to find the right words to submit when the Pope spoke of the Divine will. He could not, however, deny the worn physique before him. He had spoken in the hope of inducing the rest but he was confronted with the authority of the Supreme Pontiff.

"Hard labor has need of rest in its time," persuasively offered the prince of the church. "The Holy Father has labored hard. He needs a rest. A rest is due him. Your Holiness is tired. Why not take a long rest?"

CARDINAL WITHDRAWS

The Pontiff stirred. His face was grave with resentment. There was a moment's hesitation.

"The Lord has endowed you with many good qualities, Salotti," decreed the Holy Father in acic and peremptory terms, "but He denied you a clinical eye."

Cardinal Salotti withdrew. The embarrassed cardinal withdrew and never again mentioned anything with reference to the Pope's health.

Years were making their assault upon the physical stamina of Pius XI, but he was defiant. His powerful will tempered to match his declining body. Others were embarrassed the day's work, pain or no pain. The spirit was willing. He continued the schedule of youth. He was fighting against years. He was holding his own but at terrific cost.

Finally, Cardinal Pacelli and Monsignor Pizzardo saw that the courageous though exacting struggle constituted a diminishing strength. They asked him to permit a physician to call. He protested but eventually consented. Even then he did not name a papal physician but summoned the health officer of Vatican City, Dr. Aminta Milani.

His blood pressure was high and Dr. Milani decided that he ought to go a draining. The Pope demurred but after days of persuasion he consented. The recommended complete rest but he continued to work.

He permitted no relaxation of his ordinary schedule, and on the day appointed for the draining he received to set aside a moment for the operation.

He ordered the doctor to come in between one audience and another. The operation, a puncture behind the ear, was performed in his library chair and he withstood it with the fortitude of a martyr.

When it was over and a pad of gauze placed upon the wound, the Holy Father told the physician that that was enough and then held his handkerchief against it. He ordered the physician to withdraw and informed his secretary he would receive the next person on the audience list.

Throughout the day he continued to work. All those whom he received noticed that he was holding his handkerchief to his ear and that he was suffering. He asked no sympathy, resented it when given. It was duty to him.

At the end of the summer Pius XI left Castelgandolfo and returned to the Vatican. His continued his daily program without any abatement. Many observed, however, that he walked with apparent difficulty and that he limped occasionally.

Those who were most intimate with him in his daily life had learned that it would be unwise for them to mention anything about this obvious infirmity. They waited for the Holy Father to say that the desired the services of a physician. They waited in vain.

A Franciscan monk who had been received in audience remarked the lameness and, less familiar with the Pontiff's disdain for such an evident infirmity than those around him, was bold enough to suggest that the Holy Father should not use up so much of his strength in laborious exertion.

This received a frown as severe as that which had greeted the observation of Cardinal Salotti. The poor friar was perplexed by the order

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

FRIDAY, APRIL 8, 1938

In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world.—St. John XVI, 33.

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Dr. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, rector of Trinity Church, Boston. The next text will be suggested by the Rev. Francis E. Webster, rector of Old North Church, Boston.

The Editor Says:

"For the sake of peace, we must at once develop 100,000 fully-trained, unsurpassed pilots."—Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, American World War ace.

CAPTAIN RICKENBACKER, in his recent articles on aviation in the Hearst newspapers, stressed the TIME it takes to train an aviator.

This is a vital element to be considered in connection with aerial defense.

Our ability to defend ourselves in the air will measure our avoidance of wars in which we have no concern and our SUCCESS in wars imposed upon us.

Captain Rickenbacker's estimate of the relation of TRAINED MANPOWER to an impregnable air defense is therefore a valuable guide in our defensive planning.

In his time as a war flier an alert young man could learn enough in a few hours to fly a plane as well as any other man.

But Captain Rickenbacker puts at four years the time necessary NOW to turn out a fully-trained pilot, and the most casual reading of the technical and scientific requirements for flying bears him out.

IF CONGRESS should decide to do it, as it certainly should decide, it could probably put up the money and provide the factories and materials to supply the nation with whatever thousands of airplanes would meet the maximum military and commercial needs of the nation within a year or two.

But no amount of money or willingness could PROVIDE COMPETENT PILOTS for those planes in that time.

As Captain Rickenbacker says, we could not go to war with a major air power today with any prospect of WINNING without at least 100,000 pilots as good as the best in the world.

Certainly his urging of 100,000 pilots FOR THE SAKE OF PEACE without further loss of time accurately states our defensive needs.

WE HOPE FOR THE BEST

"President Roosevelt and his son, James, assured New Englanders today that a national flood control policy would be formulated in a short time."—Associated Press.

Residents of the valleys of the Connecticut and Merrimack rivers who read that item will be hopeful, but not too hopeful.

It is clear to everybody in this part of the country that the only thing standing between us and adequate flood control is the Roosevelt Administration.

Our State legislators approved plans for dams and reservoirs. Army engineers also said they were satisfactory.

But when they reached Washington, the trouble began. Mr. Roosevelt demanded that the Federal Government own the flood projects and that the States surrender their rights.

That is still the story. The White House, from all that we can learn, is as dictatorial as ever. And the Governors and legislators wisely refrain from giving up valuable property that belongs to the people.

Meanwhile, valley residents can only hope and pray that rivers behave and floods postpone their visit.

NEUROTICS DON'T DIE

"The mortality rate of neurotics was only 59 per cent of that of normal individuals, similarly insured. In other words, the expectation of life among neurotics was 41 per cent higher."—Dr. Peter Dorner, psychiatrist, in address to the American College of Physicians.

This eminent psychiatrist proves something we have suspected for years; "nervous wrecks" seldom die young, those who have to endure their outbursts are the ones who go to the cemetery.

The explanation cannot be given by a layman, even if he is an editor. It is definitely a scientific matter requiring countless hours of thought and study in laboratories.

We do, however, venture to offer a theory. Perhaps the bad tempers and tantrums of our neurotic brothers and sisters are not so abnormal as they seem. Perhaps the human body, like a locomotive, must blow off steam occasionally.

Undoubtedly that is why the wife who throws rolling-pins and flat-irons enjoys an extended widowhood while the husband and target goes to Heaven, via the danger list.

FOR FRED SMITHS ONLY

"The Fred Smiths of Greater Boston, following the example of others of the same name, will meet Tuesday evening to form a permanent organization."—News Item.

The Fred Smiths' plan is excellent. We endorse it. Namesakes should get together.

Boston ought to make a good showing when the Freds convene Tuesday. Counting the Fredericks and the Frederics, we find fifty-one of them in the City Directory. And proof that Fred Smiths are usually prosperous is provided by the 'phone book, which records forty-two.

Our own staff boasts one Frederick A. Smith; the Blue Book a Fred and a Frederick, and the city's leading clubs and organizations so many Freds and Fredericks that the shortness of time did not permit us to obtain the exact number.

We would like to be at the Fred Smith convention. We know we could expect a good time. But we can't. Our name is neither Fred nor Smith.

"There's Our Main Line of Defense!"

By Nelson Harding

"Every day, with the progress in aeroplane construction, aeroplane defense becomes more and more the chief defense to be relied upon by a nation which wants war kept from its confines.

"Every day the failure to provide complete air defense lays our country more and more open to attack by air—attack which no armies or navies, no matter how powerful, can repel.

"THE WAY TO DEFEND AMERICA FROM RAVAGES OF WAR—AND THE ONLY WAY TO DEFEND IT—IS IN THE AIR."

—William Randolph Hearst in a signed editorial.

The Voice of New York

By Louis Sobol

IN kindergarten days, I would scare the living daylights out of myself by parading awesome ogres and bogey-men in my mind—all heavily bearded. I'd toss half the night floundering in a quagmire of beards. Whiskers no longer scare me because I know some kindly-hearted gentlemen who effect them. Sir Hubert Wilkins, for instance. Saw him the other night, beard and all, dining with Lady Wilkins at Armando's. He looked very meek. Author Ernest Boyd has a neat triangle trim dripping from his chin. Illustrator Al Hirschfield—Publicist Herb Cruikshank—Satirist G. B. Shaw—nothing foreboding about them except to barbers trying to make an honest penny. World bogey-men of today, on the other hand, are beardless . . . Stalin, Hitler, Mussolini—and my landlord.

Manhattan Oddities:—The twin towers on the Waldorf-Astoria have different colorings—one reddish—the other white. The reason for that is, when Architects Schultze and Weaver designed them, they experimented with aluminum topping . . . The elements wore away the topping leaving the burnished copper . . . 58th street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, boasts restaurants and lunchrooms for almost every nationality—from Turkish to Russian . . . Appropriately enough, the one at the corner is named Roosevelt Grill . . . On the other hand, there are no less than 11 Chinese restaurants on 49th street . . . The best view of Manhattan's famous inspiring skyline is from the Governors Island Ferry . . . Boats leave every half hour and you're the guest of the U. S. Government . . .

Pathetic drifter along night club row is the blondish young man who styles himself the Count of Covadonga. Still cherishing dreams of the day when he will return to rule over all Spain, he welcomes companionship of the rabble who assemble at the gay bistros—but seems lost when rare occasion finds him in the midst of deposed nobility (of lesser rank than his) now finding haven in Manhattan. The Russian princes and princesses who congregate at El Morocco or Stork, LaConga or the Colony or at Twenty-One, are far more arrogant and choosier in their associates. Spain's ex-Crown Prince is democratic—because, perhaps he is so certain in his heart that he of all refugees, will sit on a throne again.

The "Ghostwriters' Bureau" advertises daily its offer to find the "right word" for "any topic, any purpose, any length. We write it—you sign it." I feel very friendly toward this little organization because once—and will I ever forget it—I was a ghostwriter. I "ghosted" those intimate messages of Queen Marie of Rumania and of Helen Keller. I "confessed" for Peaches and Daddy Browning and for three days I was Natacha Rambova who was Mrs. Rudolph Valentino. I would like to skip by hastily those trying days when I was the Gibbs Siamese Twins—also their mother—or the few weeks I spent in the role of James Mills, husband of the murdered Mrs. Mills.

Therefore, when I learn that suddenly a great comedian or a ball player or an aviator or a tennis champion has become a writer of note, you can't blame me if downright skepticism affects me. I can understand Mr. Jack Dempsey operating a restaurant, for instance, but if tomorrow a novel should appear bearing his name as author, I would sulk in disbelieving rebellion from Bowling Green to Van Courtlandt Park because that's the way I am.

Snapshots:—On Broadway at Fourth street, a pock-marked lad in tweed cap, hugs three pink and white blinking puppies under his protective coat . . . The tiny heads peek out curiously . . . "Thoroughbreds," he announces, cautiously, "$5 apiece!"

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

RETURN OF ROMANCE

The amazing success of "Snow White," or Charlie McCarthy" and other creatures of pure fantasy, is a cause for delight to every idealist and every romanticist.

The reign of stark realism is over! Once more the world seems to be turning to illusion for that "escape from reality," which has been sneered at and excoriated by the realists for the last two decades.

Good Heavens! WHY must we deny ourselves an "escape from reality" in these days when reality is such a black bugaboo? Why must we concentrate on bills and banks and budgets for 24 hours a day, when we can escape for an hour or two to the beautiful Land-of-Never-Was via our imagination?

Give us back our dreams, give us back our "bunk"; give us "RELIEF" from reality! That is the "relief" we need most. Let's be thankful that the drouth is over and that romance and ideality are coming into fashion again.

Even "romantic love," so bitterly denounced by the debunkers, is getting a show on the stage and screen these days.

Personally, I am an unblushing romanticist and MUST have my daily dose of "bunk"—like any other addict. I wept deliciously through Garbo's beautiful "Camille." "Lost Horizon" held me spell-bound three times. And Jeanette MacDonald's "Firefly," with its lovely music, I saw twice.

More power to the movies and the radio and the books, which are turning to imaginative inspiration, and turning away from ugly sex problems and bald realism for their effects.

May they continue to sprinkle a little star-dust on this plain hunk of poundcake called "modern love"—to make it seem more like a wedding-cake and less like a bomb or a fire-alarm.

More power to Snow White!

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

EACH year it would appear that the tailors are conspiring to make us louder and funnier. But the show never quite comes off as advertised. Raspberry, burgundy, rosy-copper and powder blue, decreed this year for men's daytime wear, are never quite so startling in a fabric as they are coming off a press wire from Chicago, where the merchant tailors meet and decide on our seasonal color scheme.

The tailors just can't forget Beau Brummel, with his striped green velvet coat embroidered with silver flowers, or his fat friend George, the Prince Regent, with his scarlet waistcoat, or D'Orsay, with his silver coat and gilt buttons. They'll never be happy until they bring back those days.

As the crocuses unfold and the birds pipe again, we get news that the above colors are not only available, but almost mandatory; yet it seems that there is little to worry about in eccentric tailoring or disturbing changes of any kind. About the worst that will happen is that the tailor will nick half an inch off your trouser cuff, possibly cinch you a bit tighter around the waist.

But the tailors do seem to be all worked up about his color stuff, not only for daytime but for nighttime wear. Dinner jackets are specified for powder blue or burgundy, but with black trousers.

A generation ago the funny papers always had the dude aping the Prince of Wales. The first cuffs on trousers were supposed to be in the line of such slavish imitation, also the saucer pearl buttons on tan or covert topcoats.

Until three or four years ago, our style designers used to keep a sharp eye on the Prince of Wales, but that's all over—not because Edward of Windsor is any less of a snappy dresser than he used to be, but because Hollywood is taking the play away from London in pacing the changes and subtleties of bang-up men's wear.

The movie capital has attracted some of the best stylists of the world, and it has a handsome gallery of clothes models. They tell me that the effectiveness of Hollywood tailoring has started other countries copying America, instead of our being subservient and imitative, as in the past.

There is also to be noted the fact that skilled producers work with the tailors to accentuate individual characteristics of the actor and build him up in the part. Jointly, they know how to achieve elegance, dash, savoir-faire, sophistication, or the easy assurance of loose peat-bog tweeds which the English know so well.

Quite a heavy-hitting piece appeared in one of the Hollwood magazines recently about the aid to varied personality fulfillment in the screen play of varied and clever clothes design.

Don't think that some boss tailors and textile makers go into a semi-annual huddle and decree just what you will have to wear. There are scientific techniques, as well as the above commmercial and dramatic blend, which chart the course of changing fashions for men.

For instance, in the last year or two, you have heard, a lot about radiation, porosity, sun repellance and ray absorption as properties of new fabrics. There is a great deal of sound research back of all this, in the quest of light, durable and comfortable summer clothes for men, which are now coming through.

In 1929, there were signs of something like a revolt against hot, uncomfortable clothes. We wanted something that would let in the air and rest lightly on our bodies. The last decade has brought zephyr-weight, synthetic materials which will hold their color and hold a press and, above all, allow comfort in hot weather. Along with them have come some cool feather-weight hats and a wide variety of light, summer-weight shoes.

It used to be that an ordinary pair of men's shoes weighed one-fourth of a pound more than all the clothes of the average woman—in the summer—including shoes. That is changing and we can now be both correct and comfortable.

March of Events

By Benjamin DeCasseres

MAYBE in fifty years from now the world may read something like the following from the 1938 "Diary of Adolf Hitler":

Monday: Annexed all the Baltic states without firing a shot. Gave them three hours for a plebiscite in my favor.

Tuesday: Put Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Rumania under the Swastika before lunch and in the afternoon went prospecting in an airplane for some fertile real estate in the Ukraine. Gave England trading rights in Amsterdam in my province of Holland in return for all our English-held colonies.

Wednesday: Liquidated Denmark and Switzerland this afternoon. Dined with Mussolini, who now goosesteps and heils! Like a regular storm trooper.

Thursday: Ordered the French out of Paris. I have my own ideas about that town.

Friday: Gave Sweden three hours' notice to put a German on the throne—or else—as they say in America.

Saturday: England and France send notes of protest. These democracies! Wurst!

Sunday: I think I'll move Mussolini and the Italian people into Spain bodily. I need Italy as a southern coaling station.

"Man is not built for perfection," said a wise fellow.

So, I sometimes think that if the world stopped aiming at perfection and looked more firmly and courageously into the eyes of natural facts it would not have so many ills.

Ideals are splendid things for private contemplation and aspiration, but in the great bullring of life they are of little value.

The trouble with the world right now is "idealists." Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin, Trotsky, Franco, Negrin, Eden and Blum are fundamentally men who aim at materializing some homegrown idea of "perfection."

Where they are all going to slip up, including our own perfection-lounds in Washington, is on human nature, which, by the way, has an ideal of "perfection" of its own. It is this:

"I'll do, now or ultimately, as I darn well please."

To prove my oft-repeated contention that there is a growing lunatic fringe among "economists," a school of these fish has been discovered by Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory. They believe that sun-spots cause the ups and downs of business.

"A correlation between a sun-spot and the grain market is found, and then they form a theory," said Dr. Shapley.

The rulers of Europe used to have a court astrologer. He was dressed, as you recall, in a dunce-cap and a flossy spangled kimono.

This fellow used to tell his royal nobs where the missing house silver was by consulting the stars.

If we remain much longer in the hands of the "economists" who are running the show at Washington we may hear next of a Secretary of Sun-Spots—also, of course, with a dunce-cap on his head.

The Political Parade

By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, April 8.

OUTRIGHT defeat of the President's bill to reorganize the government as he may see fit, has become essential to the economic recovery of the country.

And it can be defeated!

It is not so much fear of a dictatorship which has now gripped Congress.

The same fear is sweeping Congress that is sweeping the country—fear that the passage of this bill will bring about another decline in stock market values, wiping out more millions of the people's savings, and producing more paralysis, and more unemployment.

The instinct of the people against this reorganization measure, as a breeder of deeper depression, is absolutely sound.

Look over American history, and you will be struck by the fact that in every crisis the instinct of the people invariably has been sound.

Do you realize that Mr. Roosevelt has all the powers necessary to reorganize the government, for economy and efficiency, under the budget law of 1921?

Why doesn't he proceed to reorganize under this law?

What Mr. Roooosevelt demands—as he disavows all dictatorial aims—in the power to reorganize himself—without congressional restraint.

The proposed new Public Welfare Department may be the rock on which the bill will split.

Harry Hopkins is to be at the head of it—so everyone says—and many House Democrats see this vast political machine being devoted to the nomination and election of Hopkins as the New Deal candidate in 1940.

Hopkins has been quoted to the President himself as having said "To H—— with Congress!"

As the vote on reorganization neared the House was filled with gossip of generous offers of patronage in A.A.A. jobs for clerks and stenographers suddenly became available, where before there had been famine!

Democratic national committeemen and State chairmen suddenly began bringing pressure on Democratic House members to vote for the bill.

It is up to the people to save themselves.

If you can't wire your Representative in Washington—your Senator—write to him. There is yet time. Give your address. These telegrams and letters are being checked by official mailing lists.

Let your representatives in Washington realize that you are a bona fide constituent and TREAT YOU WANT THIS BILL DEFEATED TO SAVE THE COUNTRY FROM PANIC.
